INTRODUCTION

The University Seminars are groups of professors and other experts, from Columbia and elsewhere, who gather once a month to work together on problems that cross the boundaries between university departments.

Each Seminar elects its own officers, plans its own program and selects its own Members from Columbia, Associate Members from elsewhere, and any speakers or other guests it invites to its sessions. About half the Seminars admit selected graduate students as guests. Seminar participants and speakers attend by invitation and neither pay nor are paid, although a central office supports travel and hotel expenses for speakers when its endowment income permits.

As independent entities, the Seminars can take intellectual risks the University might not otherwise assume. They provide something every great institution needs: a small area where activities are fast, cheap, and out of control. Columbia is one of the few universities, or businesses, with the courage to institutionalize such independence.

The Seminars link Columbia with the intellectual resources of the surrounding communities. This outreach also offers to both worlds the fruits of interaction and mutual criticism, as well as the advantages of close contacts: a place to network, establish ties, exchange scholarly or professional news, or explore either side of the job market.

For the benefit of a broader audience, the Seminars make the minutes of most past meetings available to users of the Columbia Library. Each Seminar has a web page, but decides for itself how to use it. (To encourage candor in discussion of controversial issues, Seminars may exercise discretion over the contents and distribution of their minutes.) The Seminars subsidize the publication of certain books written under their auspices, and arrange conferences to make public their discoveries or to work quietly with scholars too distant to be regular Seminar participants.

Some Seminars are tight, restricted discussion groups that study unfashionable problems; others are broad-based lecture series where eminent visitors disseminate the latest knowledge. Frank Tannenbaum, the founder of the University Seminars, believed that uniformity would destroy them.

Scholars seeking to attend a Seminar should email their credentials to the Chair listed in this directory. Email addresses are on the website: www.columbia.edu/cu/seminars.

HISTORY OF THE SEMINARS

In the nineteen thirties, Professor Frank Tannenbaum had discussed with Nicholas Murray Butler the idea of ongoing groups of Columbia professors and experts from the whole region to explore matters no single department had the breadth or the agility to study. Butler liked the idea as a quick way to mobilize the intellectual resources of the University about suddenly emerging problems, but World War II supervened and it was 1944 before his successor, Frank Fackenthal, approved the first five University Seminars. Three of these Seminars still meet: Peace, Religion, and The Renaissance.

The Seminars have continued to serve Butler's purpose, but they have also become an intrinsic part of the enterprise Columbia does better than any great university in the world, the ongoing education of its own faculty.

Most of this education takes place within the academic departments, but Tannenbaum was continuing a tradition of General Education in a Core Curriculum that Columbia had been developing for thirty years. The Contemporary Civilization and the Humanities courses are famous for the breadth they give Columbia undergraduates, and astonishingly unrecognized as a bootcamp where econometricians acquire sophistication by conducting rough and tumble discussions of Plato.

This tradition positioned Columbia professors to invent the interdisciplinary regional institutes that trained graduate students to handle post-war complexities beyond their departments, but also forced political scientists, economists, and literary scholars to learn from each other. Over the past two thirds of a century, the Seminars have offered more and more specialists from Columbia and elsewhere the chance to learn and discover things together.

When Tannenbaum died in 1969, there were fifty Seminars. He and his wife left the Seminars a million and a half dollars in their wills, to be invested and reinvested as a dedicated part of Columbia's Frank Tannenbaum 1893–1969; historian of Latin America; Slavery; and Prison Systems. Professor Tannenbaum was a founder and the first director of the University Seminars.

The philosopher James Gutman succeeded Tannenbaum as director of the Seminars; and in 1976, Aaron Warner, professor of economics and Dean of the School of General Studies was appointed as his successor.

endowment. Tannenbaum wrote a charter to “protect the spontaneity of the Seminars from an unstructured situation [in which] interference is inevitable, because the desire for general rules and uniformity is irresistible.” The Director of the Seminars was to be appointed by the President of the University but selected and instructed by a General Committee, consisting of Columbia’s President, Provost, and the chairs of all the Seminars.

In the four decades since, the number of Seminars has grown to the eighty-one listed in this Directory. About half the Seminars that have been founded are still meeting, while half have merged, split, or dissolved. James Gutman followed Tannenbaum as Director from 1969 to 1975, followed by Aaron Warner, from 1976 to 2000, when Robert Belknap succeeded him.

THE SIXTY-FOURTH ANNUAL DINNER MEETING

TANNENBAUM-WARNER AWARD

for Exceptional Service to the University Seminars to

SETH NEUGROSCHL

This year's award was presented to Seth Neugroschl, the Co-Chair of the Seminar Computers, Man and Society. Professor Neugroschl, like his father, mother and wife, took Columbia degrees, earning his BA as a member of the class of 1940. He took a degree in industrial engineering in 1941, developing an interest in managing change coherently. For the next 23 years, he managed industrial plants, and then worked in the Marshall Plan and later for AID, in Europe and Latin America. In 1964, Professor Neugroschl's consulting experience led him to IBM, where he spent eight years as a management planner in their advanced systems development division. While at IBM, he taught Organizational Design and Behavior at Columbia. He was a member of Robert Livingston's Seminar on Organization and Management, and has been a chair of our Seminar on Computers, Man and Society since 1981, the same year IBM announced the PC.

Presentation of the Tannenbaum Award was followed by The Tannenbaum Lecture, "George Washington's Third Term: the afterlives of democratic politicians," given by Lisa Anderson, the James T. Shotwell Professor of International Relations in the Department of Political Science and at the School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA) at Columbia University. The dean of SIPA from 1997 to 2007, Professor Anderson has written widely on academic freedom, social science and public policy. Her recent book, Pursuing Truth, Exercising Power: Social Science and Public Policy in the Twenty-first Century (Columbia University Press, 2004), was an outgrowth of the Leonard Hasting Schoff Memorial Lectures of 2000. Professor Anderson is one of the United States' most eminent scholars of the Middle East and North Africa and a noted authority on modern Libya. Her research focuses on state formation, regime transition and social change. Before coming to Columbia, where she also served as Director of the Middle East Institute and chair of the Political Science Department, she taught at Harvard University. She is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, and has served on the Board of Trustees of the American University in Cairo. As of fall, 2008, Professor Anderson is the Provost of the American University in Cairo.

From “George Washington’s Third Term: The Afterlives of Democratic Politicians” by Lisa Anderson

For decades—indeed centuries—the United States has promoted democracy as the most desirable form of government. Much energy has been devoted to drafting constitutions, designing representative institutions, constructing electoral systems, and assessing the most desirable sequence of reforms for democratic transitions. Throughout, however, almost no attention has been given to the individuals who make themselves the trial subjects of democratic experiments: the elected officials of new democracies. Yet the decision to risk defeat in elections or—more boldly—to retire from office at the end of one’s term, assumes that political figures have something else to do—a metaphorical farm to which to repair.

In the industrialized world, there is a robust private sector into which to retire; handsome speaking fees, lucrative consultancies and prestigious appointments await retired public servants. Bill Clinton’s post-presidential life is well documented; Ireland’s Mary Robinson made a career of advocacy, serving as the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights and now as President of a foundation-supported NGO. Even in new democracies, former heads of state sometimes do very well: Mexico’s Ernesto Zedillo teaches at Yale and serves on the board of directors of Procter & Gamble, Union Pacific, Alcoa, and Electronic Data Systems.

But for many newly retired new democrats, the question is not so clear. Take, for example, Benjamin Mkapa, former President of Tanzania (and Columbia alumnus), who stepped down in December 2005 at the end of his second five-year term. Accustomed to the perquisites of office, including a controversial presidential jet, Mkapa’s plans were the object of considerable curiosity; by the spring of 2006, he was the focus of local press stories complaining that he was virtually invisible: “Mkapa should come out and tell us what he is doing. We have the right to know what our former president is doing.” Insofar as democracy depends on the willingness of its most faithful servants to abandon their roles, failure to attend to the afterlives of public servants represents a striking, and perhaps even dangerous, omission on the part of both its promoters and its scholars.

Lisa Anderson, the James T. Shotwell Professor of International Relations in the Department of Political Science and at the School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA) at Columbia University

Douglas A. Chalmers is a Professor Emeritus of Political Science at Columbia University. He has served as Chair of his Department, Acting Dean of the School of International and Public Affairs and Director, the Institute for Latin American Studies. His Yale PhD dissertation was on post-WWII German party politics (The Social Democratic Party of Germany, from Working-class Movement to Modern Political Party, Yale University Press, 1964) He has written about parties and clientalism in Latin America, particularly in Brazil and Mexico. More recently he has written on social movements and civil society organizations. He was an author and co-editor of The New Politics of Inequality in Latin America published in 1997 by Oxford University Press, suggesting the importance of personal, 'associative networks'. Very preliminary versions of the current lectures were presented and published in Argentina and Mexico.

THE SCHOFF AND WARNER PUBLICATION AWARDS

In 1991, Leonard Hastings Schoff's will endowed a fund to support the publication of books written under the auspices of the University Seminars that involve the Social Sciences or their subject matter and have been accepted for publication. Seminar members, guests, and even speakers may send the Seminars Director a letter, or better, an e-mail, naming the publisher, describing the contribution of a Seminar to some part of their text, and giving an outline or table of contents in a page or two, as well as listing the sums available and those needed for indexing, translating, editing, picture permissions, etc. Usually, though not always, the Schoff Committee decides on its allocation quite promptly. In 2008, the Seminars allocated parallel funds for the Aaron Warner awards, to be granted in the same way as the Schoff funds, but not restricted to the Social Sciences. A dozen Seminar members have already applied and been awarded funds under the new Warner fund.

In 2007–2008, nine books were published with assistance from the Schoff fund; two Schoff-supported works that appeared in 2006 are also belatedly listed:

Frances Bernstein, The Dictatorship of Sex: Lifestyle Advice for the Soviet Masses, April 2007

Edward J. Blum, W.E.B. Du Bois, American Prophet; May 2007

Eliot Borenstein, Overkill: Sex, Violence, and Contemporary Russian Popular Culture; November 2007

Krin Gabbard and William Luhr, editors, Screening Genders, July 2008

Uwe P. Gielen, editor, Principles of Multicultural Counseling and Therapy, June 2008

2007–2008 SEMINAR CONFERENCES

The University Seminars are ongoing companies for which monthly discussions have proved an efficient way to discover or transmit important understandings. Occasionally, however, a Seminar's central concerns involve scholars too distant for regular participation, or a Seminar wants to engage a broader audience in its concerns. On such occasions, the Seminar Chair, usually accompanied by an energetic colleague or two, discusses the viability of the idea with the Seminars Director. Seminar-sponsored conferences may last half a day, or more than a week, may have a dozen invited experts working alone on a problem, or may be open to the public. Conferences often have co-sponsors and do not have to meet at Columbia. Seminars may receive funds for travel, accommodations, meeting rooms, audio-visual rental, translators, food, but not for honoraria, even from a co-sponsor.

In 2007–2008, seven Seminars sponsored or co-sponsored the following conferences:

THE PULSE OF DEATH NOW

The Austin H. Kutscher Memorial Conference

An interdisciplinary meeting on the experience and representation of mortality in the 21st Century

Sponsored by the Columbia University
Seminar on Death

Saturday March 29, 2008
Columbia University
The Kellogg Center

The Columbia University Seminars were founded in 1945 as a meeting ground for cross-disciplinary and inter-institutional inquiries, bringing together academia, policy makers and community practitioners. The Seminar on Death, one of seventy-five seminars, was established by Austin H. Kutscher in 1970 and flourished under his enthusiastic and resourceful leadership for several decades. At his death in May 2007, Dr. Kutscher was professor emeritus of psychiatry at Columbia University.

Members and associates of the Seminar on Death are drawn from faculty departments of Columbia University, from other colleges and universities, and from experts and specialists in nonacademic pursuits, representing, among other fields, medicine, psychology, anthropology, art history, religion and ethics.

SHAKESPEARE AND HISTORY

A Day-Long Colloquium

15th in this Series

This year's presentations focus both on Shakespeare's plays on English history — particularly those covering the reigns of Henry IV and Henry VI—and on such topics as Shakespeare's view of time, his treatment of aging, the relationship of other plays of the period to his work and the history of their staging and production.

Saturday, October 20, 9:30 a.m.–3:30 p.m.

TIME GOES IN DIVERSE PACES: HISTORY AND DRAMA IN SHAKESPEARE

Lawrence Danson

Lawrence Danson is professor of English at Princeton University, where he is currently the Cotsen Faculty Fellow, awarded in recognition of his undergraduate teaching. He has written Tragic Alphabet: Shakespeare's Drama of Language and The Harmonies of "The Merchant of Venice" (both for Yale University Press) and Shakespeare's Dramatic Genres (for Oxford University Press). Most recently he edited the Longford Cultural Edition version of The Merchant of Venice. In addition to many articles on Renaissance drama, Danson has also written Max Beerbohm and the Act of Writing and Wilde's

Intentions: The Author in His Criticism (both Oxford). Shakespeare's history plays (and plays about history) dramatize his truism that "Time goes in diverse paces." "Time" includes the vast sweep of history as well as the daily treadmill of one-damning-after-another; it is not only the subject of history but the medium of drama; the plays enact time as the actual medium of the two (or three) hour's "traffic of the stage."

THE BREATH OF KINGS: BRITTLE GLORY AND NAKED AMBITION IN SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II

Thomas Cartelli

Thomas Cartelli is a National Endowment for the Humanities Professor of Humanities at Muhlenberg College. He is co-author, with Katherine Rowe, of New Wave Shakespeare on Screen (2007), and author of Repositioning Shakespeare: National Formations, Postcolonial Appropriations (1999) and Marlowe, Shakespeare, and the Economy of Theatrical Experience (1991). He has recently edited Richard II in a new paperback series of Shakespeare's plays to be published by Barnes & Noble, and is currently assembling a Norton critical edition of Shakespeare's Richard III. Both volumes are forthcoming in 2008.

Seeing Richard II as more about the rise of the ambitious Henry Bolingbroke than the self-defeat of the King. Thomas Cartelli concentrates on moments of suspended “text” whose implications we tease out and constantly rewind. Putting the play in conversation with earlier dramatic works, he explains why the story was so often retold and why it mattered.

TIME'S DOTING CHRONICLES (2 HENRY IV, 4.4.126): SHAKESPEARE'S GEEZERS, POLITICS AND NOSTALGIA

Naomi Conn Liebler

Naomi Conn Liebler is professor of English at Montclair State University, where she has taught since 1972. In 1990 she was named a University Distinguished Scholar. She has published four books: Shakespeare's Festive Tragedy: The Ritual Foundations of Genre (Routledge, 1995); Tragedy, a theory reader co-edited with John Drakakis (Longmans Critical Readers Series, 1998); The Female Tragic Hero in English Renaissance Drama, an edited collection of essays (Palgrave, 2002); and, most recently, another edited collection, Early Modern Prose Fiction: The Cultural Politics of Reading (Routledge, 2007). Her current research focuses on “Shakespeare's Geezers,” his negotiations of old age throughout his dramatic and poetic genres.

2 Henry IV is particularly concerned with time as succession and as national crisis. Shakespeare pauses to reflect on time's passage as a concern more personally focused on two old men, representatives of law in the lives of ordinary folk. Their exchange occupies the central space of the play (3.2) and these old men function as metonymies for right rule, succession and redemption, and thus as a serious meta-commentary on the Tudor Myth.

SHAKESPEARE'S EARLIEST HISTORY PLAYS

Phyllis Rackin

Phyllis Rackin is professor emerita of English at the University of Pennsylvania. A former president of the Shakespeare Association of America, she has published extensively on Shakespeare's history plays. Her books include Stages of History: Shakespeare's English Chronicles (Cornell, 1990, 1993); Engendering a Nation: A Feminist Account of Shakespeare's English Histories (Routledge, 1997), which she wrote in collaboration with Jean E. Howard; and Shakespeare and Women (Oxford, 2005).

Although Shakespeare's Henry VI plays have suffered a long history of neglect and disfavor, they were popular in their own time. Phyllis Rackin examines and challenges the arguments often given for the supposed inferiority of these plays, and argues that they may well be due for a major revival.

The Reflective Self

A Panel Discussion on Egological and Non-Egological Approaches to Consciousness

SATURDAY – MARCH 1, 2008

301 PHILOSOPHY HALL, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

Does all conscious experience involve some kind of self-awareness? Is consciousness fundamentally “egological” (being constituted by an ego, or sense of “I”)? Is it possible to reconcile a view of consciousness that takes the first-personal dimension seriously with a non-egological position?

A recent trend in Analytical philosophy of mind is to argue that consciousness essentially involves intransitive self-consciousness, in addition to transitive (object-directed) consciousness. In Continental phenomenology, this thesis derives from Brentano and is central to Husserl’s thought. Though this issue has prompted some discussion between these two traditions, very little attention has been paid to philosophical discourse in the Indo-Tibetan tradition, in which issues of selfhood are of greatest concern.

The time has come for dialogue and debate.

THE RISORGIMENTO REVISITED

19th-Century Italian Nationalism at the Intersection of Culture and Politics

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

The Italian Academy at Columbia University, New York City, 11-12 April 2008

In the last fifteen years the study of the Italian Risorgimento has been renewed in significant ways. By drawing on the approaches to the study of nationalism pioneered by Anderson, Hobsbawm and others, and by utilizing the methods of the 'new cultural history' historians of the Risorgimento have been asking new questions about nineteenth-century Italian nationalism, and have reached new conclusions about its cultural and political expressions, its appeal, limitations, and long-term impact. This international conference will bring together several of the practitioners of this new research. Its aim is to make the debates on the Risorgimento known to a broader public and to encourage the development of new perspectives on the history of Italian nationalism and national identity. By addressing the issue of how modern Italian identity was first conceived and constructed, the conference will also invite reflection on the issue of nationalism in present-day Italy.

2007-2008 SEMINARS

Below is a listing of the 2007–2008 University Seminars, with their topics and speakers. The seminars are listed in order of their Seminar Number, which roughly follows their chronological founding. Some of our seminars are still going strong after more than 60 years; new ones continue to be formed. Four seminars were inaugurated last year. Our seminars span a wide range of interests, from contemporary and historical topics in religion, literature, and law, to technical and administrative issues in contemporary society, to area studies, Shakespeare and the sciences.

THE PROBLEM OF PEACE (403)

Founded: 1945

This seminar is concerned broadly with the maintenance of international peace and security and with the settlement of international disputes. It considers specific conflicts and also discusses the contemporary role of the United Nations, multinational peacekeeping, humanitarian efforts, and other measures for the resolution of international conflicts.

Chair: Dr. Roy S. Lee

Rapporteurs: Ms. Sarah Thomas and Mr. Jonathan Gant

STUDIES IN RELIGION (405)

Founded: 1945

The approaches to religion in this seminar range from the philosophical through the anthropological to the historical and comparative. We concern ourselves with religion in all of its manifestations—ancient and modern, primitive and civilized, heretical and orthodox, individual and cosmic. The guiding thread is whatever subjects are uppermost in the minds of those composing the membership at a given time. Since members come from different disciplines as well as different traditions and have a variety of personal orientations, we are assured maximum openness and flexibility.

Chair: Professor Raymond F. Bulman

Rapporteur: Mr. Joel S. Lee

THE RENAISSANCE (407)

Founded: 1945

This seminar covers all aspects of Renaissance culture, from political and social history to art history, literature, languages classical and vernacular, music, philosophy, religion, science, and learning. The Renaissance is taken to begin about the time of Petrarch and to end—according to the field examined—at various points in the seventeenth century. Later scholars who conceptualized the Renaissance are also discussed.

CONTENT AND METHODS OF THE SOCIAL SCIENCES (411)

Founded: 1947

This seminar is concerned with methodology and theory in the social sciences as well as with its substantive results. As a rule, members and sometimes guest speakers present their current research in a manner which enlightens the seminar on various theoretical and methodological advances and helps the researcher to solve his difficulties and formulate a codified view of ongoing research in social sciences.

Chair: Mr. Tony Carnes

Rapporteur: Mr. Daniel Letchworth

EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY EUROPEAN CULTURE (417)

Founded: 1962

Scholars from a variety of disciplines — history, literature, philosophy, political science, music, and art — present papers from work in progress treating some aspect of eighteenth-century European culture. The Seminar's meetings in 2007–2008 were devoted to the origins of the modern concept of free speech, both conceptually (e.g., what is the relationship between free speech and the period or idea of “the Enlightenment”?) and contextually (what conditions promoted its institutionalization?).

Chair: Dr. Elizabeth Powers
Rapporteur: Ms. Nicole A. Seary

ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT (423)

Founded: 1951

This seminar addresses issues related to the structure and management of purposeful human enterprises. The membership is highly interdisciplinary. In addition to university and visiting scholars, distinguished individuals from industry and government participate regularly. The seminar selects themes for deliberation for one or more academic years. Recent themes have been: concept formation in developing theories of management; how should managers be educated, with implications for business administration curricula; managing increasing complexity, scale and change; measurement in management; and currently, managing in times of fundamental transformations. The consistent long-range effort has been toward an operationally verifiable theory of organizing and managing, including managers' education and training, and the emerging effects of globalization.

Chair: Professor Peter V. Norden
Rapporteur: Ms. Doris Elizabeth Carrion

STUDIES IN POLITICAL AND SOCIAL THOUGHT (427)

Founded: 1968

The current diversity and vitality of the field of political theory is reflected in the wide-ranging interests of the seminar. In recent years, this seminar has explored a broad spectrum of topics and modes of discourse, including methodological analyses in historiography and the philosophy of social science, specific historical and conceptual studies of particular thinkers and ideas, and exercises in “applied” political theory dealing with contemporary issues of social and public policy.

AMERICAN STUDIES (429)

Founded: 1954

The concern of this seminar is the history, literature, and culture of the United States. The focus is primarily on nineteenth and twentieth centuries, but recent subjects have ranged from Emerson to Star Trek and African American popular art. A number of presentations have positioned the United States in transnational or comparative contexts. The seminar's strength is the variety of fields represented by its intellectually active participants. The very lively discussion periods are one of the most appealing aspects of this seminar.

Co-Chairs: Professors Monica L. Miller and Elizabeth Hutchinson

Rapporteur: Ms. Jenna Feltey Alden

MEETINGS 2007-2008

Theme: American Studies and Visual Culture

- October 4 On This Spot: Charlotte Cushman, Lady Macbeth, and the Place of American Art

Gwendolyn DuBois Shaw, Department of Art History, University of Pennsylvania

MEDIEVAL STUDIES (431)

Founded: 1954

This seminar exists primarily for the purpose of discussing problems which are of common interest to all branches of medieval studies. The seminar particularly encourages interdisciplinary topics and approaches, which will stimulate discussions of issues in the study of medieval culture. One of the great advantages of the seminar is that it brings together representatives of medieval disciplines, from Columbia and elsewhere, who otherwise would have only rare opportunities to talk about questions of common interest.

Chair: Professor Susan Boynton

Rapporteur: Mr. Liam Moore

STUDIES IN CONTEMPORARY AFRICA (435)

Founded: 1956

The seminar provides a lively forum for historians and social scientists engaged in the advanced study of Sub-Saharan Africa. Faculty and visiting scholars from Columbia University and neighboring institutions actively participate in the monthly evening sessions. Seminar discussions often focus on theoretical and comparative approaches to the study of colonial and contemporary states, processes in political mobilization and leadership, the impact of the international community, and the roles of gender and cultural identities.

CLASSICAL CIVILIZATION (441)

Founded: 1958

This seminar exists to further, in the New York area, the study of the literature, art, archaeology, and history of the ancient world. Seven meetings are held each year attended by twenty to sixty members drawn from universities and colleges within reach of New York. There is no set theme to the seminar for a given semester or year.

MODERN EAST ASIA: CHINA (443)

Founded: 1958

This seminar is concerned with the politics, society, culture, and international relations of China from the early nineteenth century to the present. Its broader purpose is to explore the evolution of Chinese civilization over the past century of revolution and rapid social change. Papers—works in progress—are circulated to members and associates in advance of each meeting. Authors are asked to give a brief oral introduction, after which a discussant comments. The entire remainder of each session is comprised of members' reactions to the paper and the author's responses.

Co-Chairs: Professors Eugenia Lean and Janet Chen

Rapporteur: Mr. Li Chen

NEW TESTAMENT (451)

Founded: 2006

This seminar focuses on texts from the Mediterranean world of late antiquity, particularly as they relate to Christian origins. While it studies the New Testament, it also considers the Dead Sea Scrolls, Nag Hammadi texts, patristic literature, rabbinic material, and Greco-Roman texts.

Chair: Professor Claudia Setzer
Rapporteur: Ms. Kimberlee Auletta

THE CITY (459A)

Founded: 1962

This seminar undertakes a wide-ranging consideration of the city—its history, functions, problems, and glories. Sessions are devoted to urban cultural and social history, and to the meaning of physical form and landscape. The heterogeneous nature of the seminar's membership is reflected in the variety of subjects that the meetings address.

LAW AND POLITICS (465)

Founded: 1963

Members of the seminar investigate the legal, political, and institutional aspects of society both as they function in reality and as they should function according to theory. The investigation is both global and timeless, although European and American interests seem to dominate. Lectures and discussions range from classical Greece, Rome, and Israel, through medieval Europe, Islam, and Asia, to modern and contemporary societies. Aspects of Roman, Canon, Talmudic, Common, and Islamic laws are examined. The majority of the lectures are presented by the members of the seminar, most of whom are academics in history, political science or law, or professionals who have become editors. One or two papers each year are presented by visiting scholars.

COMPUTERS, MAN, AND SOCIETY (467)

Founded: 1966

Networked computers are rapidly converging with telephones and TV into globally pervasive digital communications systems. These systems—and the emerging New Medium which they support—are increasingly impacting what and how we communicate with each other, ourselves, and the accumulating human record. The opportunities and threats these systems pose to personal and global quality of life, and even potentially to human survival, are very real and relatively little understood. Further, they can only be assessed in the context of the larger, rapidly changing realities—global to personal—in which they are embedded. This seminar offers humanists, technologists, physical and social scientists and practitioners a forum to move beyond their specialist frames of reference; to help evolve an integrated individual user and social system oriented view of this new human symbiote.

ECOLOGY AND CULTURE (471)

Founded: 1964

Abandoning previous, widely held assumptions about the balance of nature and about distinct, bounded, and well-integrated societies or cultures whose stable adaptations to their environments can be identified, analyzed, and explained, the seminar focuses on the flux rather than the balance of nature and on how variable human actions and the ideas behind them relate to that flux or are part of it. Seminar presentations are primarily concerned with showing either complex and contingent interactions of people and their environments or methods and theories for studying and analyzing such interactions.

THE STUDY OF THE HEBREW BIBLE (473)

Founded: 1968

The seminar is composed of Jewish and Christian scholars with a common interest in research and teaching of the Hebrew Bible. The focus of the seminar is research illuminating the cultural milieu, language, text, and interpretation of the Hebrew Bible. This research is characterized by a variety of methodologies, including historical-critical, literary, philological, archaeological, and sociological approaches to the text, as well as history of interpretation. Research on ancient near eastern cultures and languages relating to ancient Israel is also regularly presented.

SOUTH ASIA (477)

Founded: 1964

The University Seminar on South Asia seeks to broaden and deepen understanding about the region of South Asia by providing a forum to discuss ongoing research as well as special topics related to the complex and multiple societies of South Asia both past and present. Drawing together scholars from many different disciplines, the seminar fosters cross-disciplinary discussion and perspectives on a broad range of questions and concerns. In recent years, the seminar has deliberated on such issues as: religion and politics, the political function of violence in South Asia, national integration, language and community, South Asian identities in pre-colonial times, religious iconography, and many other topics. The University Seminar on South Asia is a merger of the University Seminar on Tradition and Change in South and Southeast Asia (founded in 1964) and the University Seminar on Indology (founded in 1993).

THE ANCIENT NEAR EAST (479)

Founded: 1966

This seminar was created to coordinate the archaeological chronologies of the regions of the Middle East and the Eastern Mediterranean. The seminar meets from six to eight times a year and the most relevant papers were published in the American Journal of Archaeology until 1988, and afterwards, for a brief time, in the Journal of the Ancient Near Eastern Society. Recently, the focus of the seminar has been widened to include all aspects of the ancient cultures of the Near East and its adjoining regions.

STUDIES IN MODERN ITALY (483)

Founded: 1966

This seminar is concerned with political, social, cultural, and religious aspects of Italian life from 1815 to the present. In recent years, the seminar has stressed an interdisciplinary approach to Italian studies, increasing the participation of anthropologists and scholars of art, film, and literature. The seminar meets on the second Friday of the month, from October to April, to discuss a paper presented by a member or an invited speaker. Papers cover a wide range of topics, approaches, and methodologies. The seminar occasionally holds a day-long conference or a more restricted symposium to explore a topic in depth.

TRADITIONAL CHINA (487)

Founded: 1967

This seminar provides a forum for discussion on all aspects of traditional China. Scholars who specialize in various fields of Chinese studies—literature, linguistics, anthropology, philosophy, social and economic history, or political science—offer papers and participate in the discussion, contributing their own research, thus providing a broad spectrum of analysis through which to study traditional China.

EARLY AMERICAN HISTORY AND CULTURE (491)

Founded: 1966

This seminar explores a variety of topics each year from the founding of the European colonies in the late sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries, until the demise of the Revolutionary generation in the second quarter of the nineteenth century. The program tries to strike a balance between presentations by established scholars in the field and younger people who are just getting established. It also tries to do justice to the broad interests of colonial specialists, ranging from traditional political and constitutional themes through newer interests in demography, gender, race, and highly refined methodologies. Although the focus of the seminar has primarily been historical, participation by scholars in literature, religion, and other fields is increasingly encouraged.

POLLUTION AND WATER RESOURCES: SCIENTIFIC AND INSTITUTIONAL ASPECTS (495A)

Founded: 1968

The purpose of this seminar is to explore the effects of large scale and efficient regulation of pollution on the redistribution of available water resources. Proceedings of the seminar, collections of the lectures, are published yearly. To date, twenty-nine volumes (279 articles and two scientific books) have been printed. Besides these volumes, the seminar has contributed over forty articles written in seven languages abroad and in the United States. The research institute of the seminar, the American Academy of Ocean Sciences, conducted research actively from 1969 to 1985. During the past thirty years, thirty-three graduate students have participated in the seminar and their participation has been credited toward their studies.

ECONOMIC HISTORY (503)

Founded: 1964

The concerns of this seminar are wide ranging in time, place, and method. Emphasis is on the logic of European and American economic growth from feudal times forward with regular, but less frequent, contributions on Latin America, Asia, and Africa. Topics range from microeconomic studies of firms undergoing rapid technical change and households changing their interaction between home and market to more macroeconomic topics concerned with national and regional economic growth performance, the economics of imperialism, and the political economy of the Great Depression. Given the breadth of the seminar's membership and interests, comparative economic history is often a central element in seminar discussions. Pre-circulation of papers permits vigorous discussion.

THE ART OF AFRICA, OCEANIA, AND THE AMERICAS (509)

Founded: 1970

Founded by Douglas Fraser, this seminar addresses major issues in the fields of African, Oceanic, Native American, and pre-Hispanic Latin American arts. The seminar provides an opportunity for members to analyze, evaluate, and discuss new and continuing research, as well as various trends in scholarship. Because the membership is comprised of art historians, curators, archeologists, anthropologists, and other field specialists, seminar meetings frequently involve in-depth discussions of theoretical and methodological issues. The seminar sponsors special symposia on diverse topics; the most recent entitled Art as Identity in the Americas.

POLITICAL ECONOMY AND CONTEMPORARY SOCIAL ISSUES (523)

Founded: 1964

This seminar was founded to study the most compelling questions of the day which then related to the war in Southeast Asia, its causes, and consequences. Today the seminar continues to examine vital current issues with emphasis on their economic and political dimensions. Such issues have included welfare policy, homelessness, and strains in multicultural democracies. The underlying nature and structure of the political economy giving rise to these issues are also considered. In this regard, sessions have addressed the extension of democracy to economic enterprises, refashioning American government, developments in welfare state, changes in Marxism, and new principles of income distribution.

Co-Chairs: Professors Carol Gould, Gary Mongiovi, Philip Green
Rapporteur: Ms. Lisa Sachs

THE MIDDLE EAST (525)

Founded: 1971

The seminar usually meets once a month during the academic year. A prominent expert from here or abroad, commonly from the Middle East, leads a four-hour discussion at each meeting, assuring ample time for serious dialogue on focused issues. The seminar provides a forum for the exchange of ideas and experiences by Middle East experts in various spheres—business, banking and investment, federal service, the foundations, the media, and the liberal professions as well as academia. The seminar has become a medium for carefully defined and informed evaluation of stubborn problems in a region that symbolizes mounting instability and proliferating crises. Detailed minutes are circulated to participating members for use without attribution to uphold the confidentiality of the discussion.

APPETITIVE BEHAVIOR (529)

Founded: 1971

This seminar is comprised of professors, research scientists, and physicians from institutions of higher learning and industry in the greater New York area with a common interest in the biological and behavioral bases of appetitive behavior. Four major areas of interest are found within the group: 1) the control of food and fluid intake in man and animals and their effects on variation in body composition; 2) disorders with links to ingestive behavior such as obesity, bulimia, anorexia nervosa, and diabetes; 3) the role of the brain from pharmacological, physiological, and neuroanatomical perspectives on the control of ingestive behavior; 4) cognitive, social, and environmental controls of ingestive behavior. The seminar thus combines interests in basic control mechanisms with clinical applications.

CULTURE, POWER, BOUNDARIES (531)

Founded: 1971

The purpose of this seminar is to critically examine race, class, and ethnicity in a variety of national and international settings. Topics include: immigration policy and the immigrant experience; assimilation and cultural pluralism; racial discrimination and civil rights policy; and racial and ethnic political mobilization, and the activist tradition in social science. Topics are considered historically as well as through the analysis of current trends and issues in social policy, with a focus on political economy, particularly the international and domestic division of labor. In recent years, the seminar has devoted a good deal of attention to the recent immigrant experience. New emphasis is put on the effects of the fiscal crisis of the state, and on racial and ethnic conflicts. The inclusion of gender has also become a primary concern.

THE HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY OF SCIENCE (533)

Founded: 1972

This seminar is devoted to exploring substantive as well as methodological issues in the history and philosophy of science. Science is construed broadly and the issues considered range from epistemic and historiographic questions to issues of relevance and accountability. Topics include the presuppositions and practice of a range of life sciences, earth sciences, and social sciences as well as the physical sciences and mathematics. In the physical sciences its interests range from Galileo and Newton to Einstein and contemporary quantum theory and cosmology. In the life sciences and social sciences the fields considered include various forms of historical, evolutionary inquiry (in biology, geology, and the historical social sciences), biotechnology and ecology, economics, psychology and cognitive science, and interpretive social inquiry. The membership of this seminar includes scientists, philosophers, and historians.

IRISH STUDIES (535)

Founded: 1973

This seminar serves as an interdisciplinary forum on all aspects and periods of Irish culture. Seminar participants come from a wide variety of fields: history, literature, art history, political science, sociology, anthropology, music, and folklore. These scholars bring to any topic under discussion a diversity of background which is stimulating and informative for all present. The concern for Irish studies as a field of scholarly inquiry is reflected in the collegial sharing of information about resources and repositories for research in the field.

CINEMA AND INTERDISCIPLINARY INTERPRETATION (539)

Founded: 1964

The seminar draws from the faculty of New York-area universities and independent scholars; regular participants come from as far away as Baltimore. Attendance varies from twenty to forty-five people, with thirty being average. Half of the speakers are from within the seminar, half are from outside. They present works in progress that generally address important groundbreaking topics in film and television studies within an interdisciplinary perspective. Each session has a respondent, often a regular member of the seminar. The seminar has an international reputation among film and media scholars and has become the center for ongoing face-to-face scholarly exchanges in the field.

OTTOMAN AND TURKISH STUDIES (551)

Founded: 1974

From its inception, this seminar adopted an interdisciplinary approach to Turkic studies, and its members represent many fields. At the same time, their interests span more than twelve centuries. In most years, the program covers a selection of topics reflecting current research of members. Special anniversaries such as the Atatürk centennial (1981–1982), the sixtieth anniversary of the Turkish Republic (1983–1984), and the traveling exhibition, The Age of Sultan Süleyman the Magnificent (1987–1988), however, have provided themes around which all papers or a series of papers have been centered. Discussion on papers presented—no matter what their topic—has shown that dialogue between, for example, political scientist and art historian, medievalist and modernist, can be both stimulating and productive.

Co-Chairs: Professors Etem Erol, Christine Philliou, and Nader Sohrabi

Rapporteur: Mr. Onur Ozgode

DRUGS AND SOCIETY (553)

Founded: 1975

This seminar provides a forum for the scholarly exchange of information among key representatives of the chemical dependency research, treatment, prevention, and policy development communities. It seeks to address the important and complex questions relating to the root causes of chemical dependency and abuse, to examine and evaluate epidemiological studies, to determine the effectiveness of various treatment and prevention strategies, and to discuss the wisdom and value of current international, national, and local policies. Membership is comprised of prominent researchers, established leaders in the treatment and prevention fields, and government policy makers. Speakers in the seminar are drawn from the membership itself and by invitation from other institutions.

ARABIC STUDIES (559)

Founded: 1977

The concerns of this seminar are interdisciplinary and humanistic. In addition to Arabic language and literature, the range of interests includes topics of significance for Islamic studies: religion, philosophy, science, law and history of the Muslim world, and modern social and cultural history. The seminar affords an opportunity to members and guest speakers to discuss research in progress. Because the members come from several disciplines, the substantive discussions draw upon various fields to expand the sources, help reformulate questions, and anticipate future publications.

SOUTHEAST ASIA IN WORLD AFFAIRS (583)

Founded: 1982

This seminar is concerned with the contemporary political economy of Southeast Asia, and in particular with its international dimensions. The agenda includes current problems of economic and political change in the countries of the region, as well as issues in relations with the United States, Japan, China, and Russia. The seminar membership includes policymakers from the public and private sectors, as well as scholars, and the group as a whole has a strong policy orientation.

Co-Chairs: Professors Anne-Marie Murphy, David Denoon, and Hugh T. Patrick
Rapporteur: Ms. Carissa Dizon

ETHICS, MORAL EDUCATION, AND SOCIETY (585)

Founded: 1983

This seminar, made up of theoreticians, researchers, and educators, examines the themes of ethics, moral education, and society in a genuinely interdisciplinary fashion, covering such topics as moral motivation, moral development, moral education, and moral theory. Membership is drawn from the fields of psychology, philosophy, sociology, education, political theory, and religion. The seminar provides a meeting ground for communication and support unique to the New York metropolitan region.

Co-Chairs: Dr. Michael Schulman and Professor Kathleen Wallace
Rapporteur: Ms. Lauren Kaplan

COGNITIVE AND BEHAVIORAL NEUROSCIENCE (603)

Founded: 1986

For more than 100 years, comparative psychologists have sought to understand the evolution of human intelligence. Until recently, these efforts have been restricted to investigations of conditioned reflexes in human and animal subjects. New paradigms for studying cognitive processes in animals—in particular symbol use and memory—have, for the first time, allowed psychologists and neuroscientists to compare higher thought processes in animals and human beings. Of special interest is the question, how does an animal think without language? This and related questions concerning the nature of animal cognition have defined the themes of this seminar whose members include specialists in animal and human cognition, ethology, philosophy and neuroscience.

Chairs: Dr. Yaakov Stern and Professor Herbert S. Terrace

SCIENTIFIC LITERACY (611)

Founded: 1986

In view of the widespread concern with the notion of scientific literacy on the part of scientists, educators at all levels, industrialists, politicians, and the media, this seminar aims to analyze the wide diversity of views as to how a greater measure of scientific literacy might be obtained. There are many ways of teaching science, looking at science, and practicing science. The notion of a universal scientific literacy as a unique set of things is not at all defined; the seminar's goal is to delineate its significance and implications.

FULL EMPLOYMENT, SOCIAL WELFARE, AND EQUITY (613)

Founded: 1987

The seminar focuses on the analytical and policy issues related to full employment, social welfare, and equity. These include cross-national perspectives, primarily in other industrialized economies. The purpose is to identify and clarify the more difficult and central intellectual questions which relate to and affect the national commitment and capability to assure full employment, social welfare, and equity over long periods.

BUDDHIST STUDIES (629)

Founded: 1990

The seminar discusses issues and ongoing research in Buddhist Studies, as well as the interface between Buddhist Studies and other humanistic and scientific disciplines. Buddhism has been a powerful cultural and intellectual, as well as religious, current in all of the Asian civilizations. Its manifestations engage the scholarly concern of members of a wide range of disciplines: religious studies (itself an interdisciplinary enterprise), philosophy, psychology, history, sociology, anthropology, comparative literature, art history, and political science, among others. The seminar is focused not on a narrow range of issues concerning the Buddhist religions, but on a broad range of philosophical, cultural, social, and scientific subjects arising from the long and rich historical experience of the numerous Buddhist civilizations.

RELIGION IN AMERICA (661)

Founded: 1997

This seminar explores the role of religion in American society from cross-disciplinary perspectives: history, anthropology, literature, sociology, theology, material culture, etc. Both “religion” and “America” are broadly defined: “religion” takes into account multicultural and multifarious religious expressions in an increasingly pluralistic setting; “America” includes not merely the United States but Canada and the Caribbean as well. The members of the seminar are particularly interested in examining the religiously rich environment of New York City.

CONFLICT RESOLUTION (663)

Founded: 1997

This seminar examines the complexity of social conflicts and their resolution within a multidisciplinary framework—assembling faculty from throughout the University to present works in progress, explore opportunities for collaborative research, and discuss pedagogy in the context of conflict resolution. University scholars and practitioners in the field have presented on a wide range of topics relating to the context of conflict, social-political, economic, social-historical, and social-psychological dynamics.

THE HISTORY OF COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY (667)

Founded: 1998

This seminar provides a forum where issues that define the institutional, intellectual, and social history of Columbia University will be given scholarly consideration. Speakers will be a mix of “outside” specialists in American academic history and Columbia “insiders” who have had a direct involvement with a particular issue and a familiarity with recent Columbia folkways.

Co-Chairs: Professor Robert A. McCaughey and Mr. Chauncey G. Olinger, Jr.

MEETINGS 2007-2008

April 18 A One-Day Conference: The Student Protests at Columbia University in April 1968. What did they mean then? What do they mean now?

GLOBALIZATION, LABOR, AND POPULAR STRUGGLES (671)

Founded: 1998

The seminar seeks to clarify the boundaries of what might be broadly understood as labor politics and the labor movement by examining theoretical and historical developments in order to clarify what has been learned and what needs to be learned in the current world-historical moment of global capitalist reorganization. Included in the purview of the seminar are broader issues in popular politics as well as forms of popular action that are often identified by such alternative labels as “social movements” or “contentious” politics. Presentations, by specialists from the academic and labor communities, focus on issues in contemporary labor and popular politics, on a thematic basis, in settings around the world, and bring to bear a strongly comparative focus, which challenges a common division between specialists on labor in the industrialized world and labor in less developed areas. Debate is facilitated by the provision of papers in advance.

Co-Chairs: Professors David Bensman and Henry J. Frundt

Rapporteur: Mr. Matthew S. Winters

SEXUALITY, GENDER, HEALTH, AND HUMAN RIGHTS (673)

Founded: 1999

This seminar uses the new scholarship on sexuality to engage with ongoing theoretical conversations and activism in gender, health, and human rights. Pressed by the increasing recognition of the importance of sexuality in a wide range of advocacy and rights work (for example, HIV/AIDS, sexual and reproduction health, and sexual violence), theorists and advocates alike have struggled with the complex, sometimes fluid and elusive nature of sexuality. What is this “sexuality” in need of rights and health? How does it manifest itself across a range of persons and cultures? And how can the body of culturally and historically situated work about sexuality be helpful to advocacy interventions? The seminar also turns a critical lens on recent scholarship in light of current issues raised by policy interventions and grass roots organizing in many countries and cultures. The seminar aims to promote dialogue and exchange between academic, activist, and advocacy work and is sponsored by the Program for the Study of Sexuality, Gender, Health, and Human Rights.

Chair: Professor Carole S. Vance

Rapporteur: Ms. Alicia Peters

MEETINGS 2007-2008

LANGUAGE AND COGNITION (681)

Founded: 2000

What can the study of language contribute to our understanding of human nature? This question motivates research spanning many intellectual constituencies, for its range exceeds the scope of any one of the core disciplines. The technical study of language has developed across anthropology, electrical engineering, linguistics, neurology, philosophy, psychology, and sociology, and influential research of the recent era of cognitive science has occurred when disciplinary boundaries were transcended. The seminar is a forum for convening this research community of broadly differing expertise, within and beyond the University. As a meeting ground for regular discussion of current events and fundamental questions, the University Seminar on Language and Cognition will direct its focus to the latest breakthroughs and the developing concerns of the scientific community studying language.

Chair: Professor Robert E. Remez
Rapporteur: Ms. Sara Maria Hasbun

NEW MEDIA TEACHING AND LEARNING (683)

Founded: 2000

For many years, computing and education has been a robust and challenging field, but esoteric to many. From the time of the first browser that expanded the demographic base of users exponentially, the use of digital technologies and new media has become part of an explosive reconsideration of educational practice. The breadth of this reconsideration has touched on the content of education, its pedagogy, its place and, by inference, its range of possible participants. In response to this phenomenon, most major universities, including Columbia University, have reacted over the past 10 years with a diversity of initiatives. Some represent the need for attending to generic infrastructure, represented at Columbia by Academic Information Systems (AcIS), Administrative Information Systems (AIS) and Electronic Data Service (EDS). Many are content-specific initiatives that grow out of the intrinsic needs of specific fields, represented at Columbia by organizations such as the Institute for Learning Technologies at Teachers College, the Columbia Center for New Media Teaching and Learning, Center for New Media in the School of Journalism, Media Center for Art History in Arts and Sciences, the Center for Academic Information Technologies at the Medical School, and Digital Knowledge Ventures. What is lacking across the range of initiatives is a unifying conversation that would focus upon the essential questions at this moment of accelerated change in the educational universe. Since the field in its many expressions and through its many entities is engaged primarily in active invention, it is all the more necessary that the time scale of sharing not be driven by the glacial movement of knowledge through scholarly journals, but by the immediate possibilities provided by face to face discourse as well as mediated asynchronous communications, in order to provide benchmarks for good practice.

HISTORY AND MEMORY (689/713)

Founded: 2001/2006

This seminar is concerned with the history of slavery, particularly in New York City, and its long-term ramifications. Seminar members are scientists, clergy, historians, legal scholars, and sociologists who share an interest in learning from collective memories of slavery. The group will consider the lives and legacy of slaves in New York and how best to commemorate them. A second goal of the seminar is to develop interdisciplinary courses, which can be taught on the university and congregational levels, on the topic of memory and slavery.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION (693)

Founded: 2002

This seminar will focus on two main topics: one, analysis of issues that lie at the margin of science(s) and religion(s) in both Eastern and Western versions of these two different ways of viewing the world, with a particular focus on interdisciplinary approaches; two, studying Love in all its complex manifestations, from the biological to the spiritual. Both groups will work with the template of presentations of primary materials by the speaker (a specialist in the selected area under study, both from within and without Columbia University) followed by discussion. A primary aim of both groups is the development of appropriate curricula for the two respective fields.

Co-Chairs: Dr. Wendy Chavkin and Robert Pollack

Rapporteur: Ms. Laura Bothwell

AGING AND HEALTH (695)

Founded: 2003

Global aging is emerging as one of the foremost challenges confronting scholars in the 21st century. The unprecedented aging of the population during the next half-century portends a dramatic demographic shift with significant local, national, and worldwide implications. The seminar provides a forum to address complex, pressing aging-related issues such as increasing longevity, changes in the family system and modifications in the scope, delivery and financing of health care. Established jointly by the School of Social Work and the Mailman School of Public Health, the seminar is designed to strengthen existing linkages and augment interdisciplinary dialogue among faculties at the Morningside Heights and Health Sciences campuses and between the university and the community on health-related policy, practice and research issues specific to later stages of the life course.

Co-Chairs: Professors Denise Burnette and Victoria H. Raveis

Rapporteur: Ms. Yessica M. Diaz

DISABILITY STUDIES (697)

Founded: 2003

This new Seminar takes a broad interdisciplinary approach to Disability Studies—a rapidly expanding field informed by the knowledge base and methodologies of the traditional liberal arts and post-positivist perspectives. Disability Studies focuses on a sociopolitical analysis of disability: it examines both the social meaning we give to variations that exist in human behavior and appearance—implicit or explicit valuing that construct exclusionary categorical binaries—and the role that disability has played, currently plays and can potentially play in the arts, humanities, social sciences, and education.

Co-Chairs: Dr. Simi Linton and Professor Michelle Ballan

Rapporteurs: Ms. Grace Pasion and Ms. Stacy Pommer

ROMANTICISM AND ITS AFTERMATH (699)

Founded: 2004

The Seminar “Romanticism and Its Aftermath” explores various facets of Romanticism in their mutual relationships and cross-pollination by bringing together scholars representing a variety of disciplines: different European literatures, music, art, philosophy, history, linguistics, and theology. While the primary focus of the Seminar is the so-called “early” and “high” Romanticism of the 1790s–1800s and 1810–30s, it also addresses related phenomena that preceded and followed that epoch, such as the philosophical and aesthetic heritage of the Enlightenment, late and post-Romantic trends in late-nineteenth century music, and neo-Romantic trends in early twentieth-century modernism.

Co-Chairs: Professors Boris Gasparov and Lydia Goehr

Rapporteur: Ms. Dehlia Hannah

MODERN BRITISH HISTORY (701)

Founded: 2004

The seminar in Modern British history brings together historians from the different New York area institutions, together with literary scholars, political scientists, philosophers and others working historically, to discuss recent significant books in the field of Modern British history (from the late 17th century to the present) or to comment on work in progress by members of the group. It will meet on the second Monday of each month during the academic year; in the fall of 2007 it will meet the first Thursday of each month.

Chair: Professor Susan Pedersen

Rapporteur: Mr. Garrett Ziegler

MODERN GREEK (703)

Founded: 2005

The seminar's title emphasizes the language—modern Greek—over the metropolitan nation-state, modern Greece. By so doing, the seminar uses the enduring and versatile nature of the language as a symbol for broader themes that, both diachronically and synchronically, depict the tension between sameness and difference, between the continuities and discontinuities that comprise the Hellenic world. The seminar does not limit its focus to Modern Greece, even though it remains its foremost concern, instead it seeks to provide a forum for original interdisciplinary perspectives on Byzantine, Ottoman, and Modern Greece and the Greek diaspora. Seminar participants from a wide variety of fields consider all aspects of the post-classical Greek world as well as the reception and creative appropriation of the classical Greek tradition both in Greece and abroad. The seminar examines Greek relations with Western Europe, the Balkans, the Mediterranean, the Caucasus and the Middle East, tracing also the cultural presence of historic Greek communities in these areas as well as in more recent diasporas, in the United States and Australia. The seminar also examines the presence of diverse communities within Greece.

Chair: Professor Vangelis Calotychos

Rapporteur: Ms. Karen Emmerich

EARLY MODERN FRANCE (707)

Founded: 2005

The inaugural meeting of the University Seminar on Early Modern France was held on October 7th, 2005, in 512 Philosophy Hall. Professor Pierre Force, acting as the Seminar Chair, warmly welcomed new and current members of what was formerly the "Early Modern Salon" and explained that the group would continue to function in much the same way now that it was a University Seminar; the Seminar would continue to welcome a guest at each meeting as it had for the past years and the aim would still be to engage in lively discussion (with texts read in advance of each session), rather than promote formal presentations on the part of the guests.

Chair: Professor Pierre Force
Rapporteur: Mr. Benjamin Young

RELIGION AND WORLD COMMUNITY (709)

Founded: 2005

The Seminar examines the ways in which the world's major religions define their relationships, roles and responsibilities towards one another and the world at large. In addition to the empirical and legal dimensions, the Seminar encourages research on the meaning, hermeneutics and role of core religious beliefs and practices and internal debates in a historical context, as well as the contemporary situation. The Seminar is designed to promote new research on the texts, customs, social organizations, practices and other factors that influence political, cultural and theological relations among the world's major religions and their relationship with the community at large. The Seminar also seeks to build a local and an international collaborative research network of institutions and individuals committed to these goals.

THEORY AND PHILOSOPHY OF LITERATURE (711)

Founded: 2005

This seminar has had a long and distinguished history at Columbia. It was revived in 2006 with a view to pursuing the relations between literature, philosophy, and the politics that pervades our cultural production and its study. For some time now, literary studies has been engaged in wider theoretical approaches to texts and to the very idea of literature and criticism, and the seminar hopes to take philosophical stock of this tendency as well as to try to bring to it, wherever possible, more creative and more rigorous angles. These goals will initially be pursued broadly and ecumenically and should it turn out that one or other theme surfaces, which demands our sustained focus, the seminar will very likely take it up for a whole year, approaching it from different angles. For the most part, one of the members will circulate a paper, introduced for the seminar by another member, but occasionally, we will invite a speaker from outside the membership.

Rapporteur: Mr. Bryan Lowrance

CULTURAL MEMORY (717)

Founded: 2007

The University Seminar on Cultural Memory began in 2005 as an interdisciplinary colloquium welcoming graduate students and faculty from Columbia and its neighbors. The Seminar, incepted in 2007, builds upon this already-established community and aims to further develop a vibrant interdisciplinary dialogue on contemporary issues of cultural and collective memory, including but not limited to traumatic memory, collective and national forgetting, memorialization and museology, historical consciousness and historiography, embodied memory and performance, archive and testimony. The Seminar meets monthly and, in addition to discussing chapters and works-in-progress, hosts a series of distinguished visiting speakers, working in close cooperation with relevant departments and institutes at Columbia.

OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH AND INJURY PREVENTION (719)

Founded: 2007

Established by the faculty from the Department of Sociomedical Sciences in the Mailman School of Public Health, this interdisciplinary colloquium welcomes participation by the Columbia University faculty, the professional community and key stakeholders in the New York metropolitan area. This seminar addresses a wide range of issues in the field of occupational health, and provides an opportunity for seminar participants to analyze and evaluate new and continuing issues of growing significance with respect to occupational health. Current topics of interest include the impact of urbanization on the health of urban workers, emergency preparedness of the workforce, the aging U.S. workforce and the implications of aging on workers' health and safety. The seminar provides a framework for a multidisciplinary scholarly exchange of ideas on emerging issues, research, practice and policies affecting the health and well being of workers in the 21st century.

COMPARATIVE PHILOSOPHY (721)

Founded: 2007

The goal of the Comparative Philosophy Seminar is to provide a venue for 'non-normal discourse' and genuine inter-disciplinary dialogue. By engaging non-Western modes of thought we do not presume to arrive at better answers to the perennial problems of philosophy. Rather, we believe that it is through considering alternative perspectives that old questions can be refined and new ones may be raised.
