The University Seminars are groups of professors and other experts, from Columbia and elsewhere, who gather once a month to work together on problems that cross the boundaries between university departments.

Each seminar elects its own officers, plans its own program, and selects its own membership: members from Columbia, associate members from elsewhere, and any speakers or other guests it invites to its sessions. Approximately half of the seminars admit selected graduate students as guests. Seminar participants and speakers attend by invitation and neither pay nor are paid, although a central office supports travel and hotel expenses for speakers when its endowment income permits.

Some seminars are tight, restricted discussion groups that specialize in particular subfields; others are broad-based lecture series where eminent visitors disseminate the latest knowledge. Frank Tannenbaum, the founder of The University Seminars, believed that uniformity imposed from above would destroy them.

As independent entities, the seminars can take intellectual risks the schools and departments of the University might not otherwise assume. They provide something every great institution needs: private, autonomous venues where intellectual activity is fast, cheap, and beyond central control. Columbia is one of the few universities, or businesses, with the courage to institutionalize such independence.

The Seminars link Columbia with the intellectual resources of its local community. This outreach offers both worlds the fruits of interaction and mutual criticism, as well as the advantages of close contacts: a place to network, establish ties, exchange scholarly or professional news, or explore either side of the job market.

Seminars are closed to the general public, press, and other media. Minutes are taken at all seminar meetings. Seminars may permit their members open and immediate access to these minutes, or they may keep them closed; after five years, all minutes are incorporated into The University Seminars Digital Archive, available to scholars through the Columbia University Rare Book & Manuscript Library. Individual seminars decide which of these policies to adopt. The central office maintains a website, and each seminar has a dedicated page.

The University Seminars subsidize the publication of certain books written under its auspices and may help individual seminars arrange conferences, either to make discoveries public or to work privately with scholars too distant to be regular seminar participants.

Scholars and others interested in attending a seminar should email their credentials to the appropriate chair. For a complete list of current seminars and chairs, please visit our website: universityseminars.columbia.edu.
In the 1930’s, Professor Frank Tannenbaum and Columbia University President Nicholas Murray Butler discussed the idea of creating ongoing groups of Columbia professors and experts from the region to explore matters no single department had the breadth or the agility to study. Butler saw the idea as a quick way to mobilize the intellectual resources of the University to confront suddenly emerging problems, but World War II supervened. It was 1944 before Butler’s successor, Frank Fackenthal, approved the first five University Seminars. Three of these seminars still meet: The Problem of Peace, Studies in Religion, and The Renaissance.

The University Seminars continues to serve Tannenbaum’s and Butler’s purposes. The Seminars has also become an intrinsic part of the enterprise that Columbia excels more than any other university: the ongoing education of its own faculty. Most of this education takes place within the academic departments, but Tannenbaum was continuing a tradition of General Education in a Core Curriculum that Columbia had been developing for thirty years. The Contemporary Civilization and the Humanities courses are famous for the breadth they give Columbia undergraduates, but the demands of teaching such wide-ranging material are astonishingly unrecognized for imparting rigor and sophistication to the professors themselves: at few universities would one find an economist teaching Plato.

This tradition positioned Columbia professors to invent the interdisciplinary regional institutes that trained graduate students to handle post-war complexities beyond their departments, and forced political scientists, economists, and literary scholars to learn from each other. Over the past seventy-three years, The University Seminars has offered specialists from Columbia and elsewhere the chance to learn and discover together.

When Tannenbaum died in 1969, there were fifty seminars. He and his wife, Jane Belo, left The Seminars approximately $1.7 million in their wills (1969 & 1972), to be invested and reinvested as a dedicated part of Columbia’s endowment. Tannenbaum wrote a charter to “protect the spontaneity of The Seminars from an unstructured situation [in which] interference is inevitable, because the desire for general rules and uniformity is irresistible.” The Director of The Seminars was to be appointed by the President of the University, but Tannenbaum specified that a small Advisory Board select and guide this appointment; the Advisory Board is chosen by a general committee consisting of Columbia’s president, provost, and the chairs of all the seminars.

In 2003, Seminars Director Robert Belknap first conceived, and then over several years implemented, the project of scanning 50 years of the pre-digital minutes of the seminars. Under his supervision, over a half million pages were scanned and preserved. In 2011, Seminars Archivist Summer Hart began the task of unifying the various components of the archive. Since 2015, this treasure trove of intellectual history has been available for scholarly research in the Rare Book and Manuscript Library Reading Room of Columbia’s Butler Library.

In the four decades since Frank Tannenbaum’s death, the number of seminars has grown to the 86 listed in this directory. About half the seminars that were founded are still meeting, while half have merged, split, or dissolved. James Gutmann followed Tannenbaum as Director from 1969 to 1975, followed by Aaron Warner from 1976 to 2000, and Robert Belknap from 2001 to 2011, when his student Robert Pollack succeeded him.
The Schoff Lectures, “Fancy Sticks”: The Action-Art of Toni Morrison, Romare Bearden, and Jazz, were presented in November by Professor Robert O’Malley, directly following the election in the Fall. His talk will soon be a book in the Columbia University Press’s Schoff Memorial Lecture series. Even before the book is out, I can attest that in those lectures Bob O’Malley personified the freedom we say we each have to speak our minds, while at the same time showing the audience at each talk how exciting it is to be in the presence of a gifted teacher. In a second example of the synergistic energy emerging from the connection between The University Seminars and the University Press, we have just learned from Jennifer Crewe, Associate Provost and Director of the Press and member of our Advisory Board, that Paige West’s Schoff Lectures monograph, published as Dispossession and the Environment: Rhetoric and Inequality in Papua New Guinea, has won the Columbia University Press Distinguished Book Award. This award is funded by the Provost’s office and carries a cash prize of $10,000. It will not be a surprise to anyone who knows her that Paige had already donated her $5000 Schoff Lecturer stipend from The Seminars to Kasekock Village in Papua New Guinea for the purchase of a subservible well water pump, enabling them to have clean water for daily household use in fifteen homes. She is already planning to use some of this new prize to support the Honors degree research of a young environmental anthropologist from Papua New Guinea.

At our Annual Dinner this Spring, David Johnston gave an erudite and apt lecture on the origins of the notion of “democracy,” and The Seminars gave their Annual Tannenbaum Award to Sid Greenfield, co-chair of the Seminars on Religion, Brazil, and Knowledge, Technology, and Social Systems, who then challenged us all to look up from our dinners and consider with him the obligation we have to those fellow Americans who do not have our many privileges.

Each year the Advisory Board recommends to the Chairs the approval of some number of new Seminars, and each year a similar number of Seminars go into abeyance for a year or two for any number of reasons. So last year we supported 86 seminars, and this year we expect to support a similar number of Seminars go into abeyance for a year or two for any number of reasons. So last year we supported 86 seminars, and this year we expect to support 87. The one new seminar that has already begun this year is on Sustainable Finance, chaired by Stephen Freedman and Satyajit Bose. As she has arranged this outward enhancement of access, so too has she improved access for our members. Ann has arranged for new and comprehensive library privileges for Associate Members of a University seminar who are not affiliated with the University in any other way. I am grateful for many others who will be supporting The Seminars in the coming 2017–2018 Academic year. First, I wish to thank our colleagues associated with Faculty House, I particularly want to thank David Martin, Emerald Currie, Jasmine Parks, and Leonard Zinnanti of Faculty House as well as Scott Wright and Joe Ricciuti of Events Management. The staff in Faculty House are very kind and accommodating to us and the individual seminars; we are most grateful. In The University Seminars Office, we have been and will remain graced by the kindness, efficiency and congeniality of Alice Newton, Summer Hart, Pamela Guardia, and Gesy Alvarez. Joining them this year is John Jayos, recent graduate of the College and the new point person for all matters related to the logistics of a seminar; his hours will begin in the afternoon and extend into the evening so that we can be sure every seminar will have someone available to help if needed.

We are pleased to announce that our Schoff Lecturer this fall is Edward Mendelson; in the spring Faraa Griffin is our Tannenbaum Lecturer. The University Seminars Newsletter letter has been reestablished and will begin publication in Ay17–18. Summer Hart has initiated this important project, and calls on all chairs for input on this valuable form of communication among seminar members.

Surely “confinement within the solitude of one’s own heart” is a fate none of us would willingly volunteer for. We all have an obligation to assure that The Seminars are a place to break the solitude; a place where two or more persons may share their deepest beliefs in safety and confidence with each other, however much they may disagree. Approaching our 75th year, The University Seminars strive to foster an environment of honest advocacy, openness and mutual respect.

That said, let us look at some examples of how the Academic year went.

As social conditions become more equal, the number of persons increases who, although they are neither rich enough nor powerful enough to exercise any great influence over their fellow-creatures, have nevertheless acquired an education and fortune to satisfy their own wants. They owe nothing to any man, they expect nothing from any man, they acquire the habit of always considering themselves as standing alone, and they are apt to imagine that their whole destiny is in their own hands. Thus not only does democracy make every man forget his ancestors, but it hides his descendants, and separates his contemporaries from him; it throws him back forever upon himself alone, and threatens in the end to confine him entirely within the solitude of his own heart.

“FANCY STICKS”: THE ACTION-ART OF TONI MORRISON, ROMARE BEARDEN, AND JAZZ

I. “If the White Man Is Laughing at Me, at Least He’s Not Shooting at Me”:
   Ralph Ellison and Jean-Michel Basquiat on Louis Armstrong’s Intercontinental Comedy
   Monday, November 14, 2016, 8 PM

II. The Open Corner—Space Is the Place: Romare Bearden, Toni Morrison, Duke Ellington
   Monday, November 21, 2016, 8 PM

III. Questions of Translation: Paris Blue—from Novel and Movie to Collage
   Monday, November 28, 2016, 8 PM

These three lectures take to heart Toni Morrison’s assertion that the spaces between the art forms “are not porous, they are liquid.” If so, what terms define the modern in the liquid spaces of American art? In African American art? These talks wonder about fiction, collage, and jazz music as forms that flow into one another and as bright prisms through which to read our lives as they ask: How does any art make a difference in a world of division enforced by violence? What can these fancy sticks—writing pens, painter’s brushes, or drumsticks—what can art do to draw us together?

Robert G. O’Meally is Zora Neale Hurston Professor of English and Comparative Literature, Columbia University, and Director of Columbia’s Center for Jazz Studies. His books include: Lady Day: The Many Faces of Billie Holiday, The Craft of Ralph Ellison, and Romare Bearden: A Black Odyssey. He has edited or co-edited many volumes, including The Jazz Cadence of American Culture, History and Memory in African American Culture, and The Norton Anthology of African American Literature. Several of his music projects have won awards; his co-produced Smithsonian box set, The Jazz Singers, was nominated for a Grammy. In recent years, O’Meally has served as art curator for Jazz at Lincoln Center, and has curated many other exhibitions, one of which traveled for the Smithsonian Institution, and others presented in New York, Paris, and Istanbul. His articles have appeared in The New York Times, The Atlantic Monthly, and many other places, including Les Cahiers du Musée National D’Art Moderne and the catalogue for a current exhibition at the musée du quai Branly in Paris called The Color Line: The Art of Black America. O’Meally is an amateur saxophonist whose sons say Dad plays “for his own amusement!”

Leonard Hastings Schoff (1884–1978) was a textile manufacturer, economist, and educator. In 1948, he was appointed as Associate Member of the University Seminar on Rural Life (1945–1968), for which he was an active and continuous participant. He was also a member of several other seminars, including Population and Social Change (1940–1992) and Human Maladaptation in Modern Society (1964–1987). In 1961, he was granted the status of “Life Associate” of the University Seminars. This category was established by Frank Tannenbaum primarily for founding members, and provided Dr. Schoff with lifetime privileges.

Dr. Schoff believed that the purpose of The University Seminars was to be a place for the "development of ideas into instruments of social usefulness." In 1970, he and his wife, Suzanne Levick Schoff, made a bequest to The University Seminars to assist in the publication of learned manuscripts or monographs produced under the auspices of The University Seminars in the fields of economics, sociology, psychology, penology, or the behavioral sciences.

The Leonard Hastings Schoff and Suzanne Levick Schoff Memorial Fund has been used to support hundreds of authors whose scholarly work was presented and discussed at a seminar prior to publication.

Schoff publication funds can be used for indexing, translating, technical editing, illustrating, or other publication costs of qualifying manuscripts or monographs already approved for publication.

Other funds are sometimes available in other fields, including the sciences.

In 2016–2017, the following nine books were published with the assistance of the The Leonard Hastings Schoff and Suzanne Levick Schoff Memorial Fund*

- Zeynep Celik, About Antiquities
- Al Coppola, The Theater of Experiment
- John S. Hawley, Into Sur’s Ocean: Poetry Context, and Commentary
- Felicity Scott, Outlaw Territories: Environments of Insecurity/Architectures of Counterinsurgency
- Karen Van Dyck, Austerity Measures: The New Greek Poetry
- Paige West, Dispossession and the Environment: Rhetoric and Inequality in Papua New Guinea (Schoff Memorial Lecture Series)
- David Harrington Watt, Antifundamentalism in Modern America
- David Johnston (ed), Nadie Uribiati (ed) Machiavelli on Liberty and Conflict

"THE BIRTH OF SOCIAL JUSTICE"

Given by

DAVID JOHNSTON

"THE BIRTH OF SOCIAL JUSTICE"

This talk will be an exercise in recovering the moral commitments and conceptual innovations that led to the idea of social justice. Although many thinkers before modern times embraced ideas to which the label “social justice” might be applied retroactively, the modern idea of social justice was thinkable only by virtue of a distinctive mix of understandings that began to coalesce in the eighteenth century and took definitive shape in the early decades of the nineteenth century. Surprisingly, the source of the final and catalytic conceptual invention that made the idea of social justice possible was Adam Smith.

DAVID JOHNSTON teaches political philosophy at Columbia University, where he has served as Nell and Herbert M. Singer Professor of Contemporary Civilization and Joseph Straus Professor of Political Philosophy. He has also taught at Yale, Princeton, and Oxford. He was President of the New York State Political Science Association 1993–1994 and Chairman of the International Conference for the Study of Political Thought from 2001–2007. At Columbia, he served as Chair of Introduction to Contemporary Civilization from 1996–1999 and again in 2003. From 2003–2011 he served as Director and Chair of the Governing Board of the Society of Fellows in the Humanities. He is currently a member of the Advisory Committee of The University Seminars and the Governing Board of the Heyman Center for the Humanities. He is the author of A Brief History of Justice (with translations into Arabic, Korean, and Japanese), The Idea of a Liberal Theory, and The Rhetoric of Leviathan: Thomas Hobbes and the Politics of Cultural Transformation; editor of Hobbes’s Leviathan: A Norton Critical Edition (Second Edition forthcoming) and Equality, and co-editor of the just-published Machiavelli on Liberty and Conflict.

SIDNEY M. GREENFIELD received his BA from Brooklyn College in 1954 and his PhD in anthropology from Columbia University in 1959. He has held teaching positions at Purdue University and the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, where he served in both the departments of sociology and anthropology, chairing the latter; he is currently Professor Emeritus. Professor Greenfield was visiting professor at Barnard/Columbia and several Brazilian Universities. He has been president of two sections of the American Anthropological Association and vice president of two others. Professor Greenfield has conducted ethnographic field research in Barbados and New Bedford, Massachusetts, but mostly in various parts of Brazil, and ethnohistorical and historical research in Portugal and the Atlantic Islands. He has studied topics ranging from family and kinship, patronage and politics, the history of plantations and plantation slavery and entrepreneurship to Spiritist surgery and healing, syncretized religions such as “popular” Catholicism, African derived Candomblé, Xangó and Umbanda, Kardecism and Evangelical Protestantism with special emphasis on Evangelical participation in Brazilian politics. He is author and/or editor of nine books, producer, director, and author of five video documentaries, and has published some 150 articles and reviews in books and professional journals. His most recent book, Os Evangélicos na Política (Evangelicals in Politics) — in Portuguese with Antonio Mourá Cavalcante — was published in 2016 by The Federal University of Ceará Press. The same press also recently published a new edition of their Dr. Argeu: A Construção de um Santo Popular (Dr Argeu: The Construction of a Popular Saint). Professor Greenfield is co-chair of the Columbia University Seminars on Brazil, Studies in Religion and Knowledge, Technology and Social Systems. Finally, Professor Greenfield appeared as himself in the 2009 movie “My Last Five Girlfriends,” which premiered at the New York Film Festival.
The Tannenbaum Lectures honor the memory of Professor Frank Tannenbaum, founder of The University Seminars in 1944 and director until his death in 1969. He and his wife, Jane Belo, established a trust to be invested, reinvested, and included in Columbia’s permanent endowment. Logistical support from Columbia and donations from individuals and institutional contributors supplement this endowment.

Occasionally, a seminar’s central concerns involve scholars too distant for regular participation or a seminar wants to engage a broader audience. On such occasions, the seminar may wish to organize a conference or public symposium. Conferences and public symposia on issues of paramount interest to the seminar members and the seminars community are an exciting part of the University Seminars.

In order for the Conference Committee to consider a proposal for a conference, conference guidelines must be acknowledged and a proposal must be submitted through The University Seminars website. Additionally, the conference must come from the work of a University Seminar. All or some of the members of the seminar must be committed to being central to the conference and the organization of it, and members must agree on the basic need and goal of the conference. The seminar chair and/or selected members are expected to plan the conference.

Most importantly, The University Seminars’ charter forbids support to a conference that pays honorarium, even if it comes from an outside source.

In 2016–2017, The University Seminars sponsored or co-sponsored the eleven conferences listed on the following pages.
This conference addresses multiple challenges in the study of affect and emotion in the pre-modern period. To what extent can we assume commensurability between contemporary definitions and understandings of affect or emotion and earlier, pre-modern iterations? Can we historicize affect? How do we? One strategy is to read across the surface in pre-modern works, looking for the explicit naming of emotional states (for example, “anger” or “joy”) and the gestures and expressions associated with those states; but another might be to read between the lines and find less discursively obvious articulations of affect or emotion. How, for example, do we discern or quantify affect in a culture that might value understatement and reserve? How do we read the absence, or indeed, the extremes of emotional expression or affect in texts? How do cultural texts (artistic, literary, religious etc.) contribute to the history of emotions? And how do we account for emotional change across time?

The Worlds of the Tempest
John W. Mahon, Iona College

John W. Mahon reflects on the several overlapping/intersecting worlds in The Tempest: the courts of Milan and Naples, the world Prospero creates on his island, the utopian world proposed by Gonzalo and the very different world of the mariners. How do all of these worlds overlap the world of Prospero’s family?

Shakespeare’s Auditory Worlds Within Worlds: Hearing, Overhearing, Eavesdropping
Laury Magnus, United States Merchant Marine Academy

Laury Magnus will discuss and exemplify different kinds of hearing in Shakespeare and describe how their complex onstage dynamics involve auditors both on and offstage – and some beyond all human stages. She discusses the ways hearing and seeing are interactive, complementary modes of Shakespeare’s theater of the imagination.

Misogyny and the Portrayal of Women in Hamlet: Two Worlds of Shakespeare’s theater of the imagination.
Louise Geddes, Adelphi University

In 1604, The Beatles performed “Pyramids and Thieves”, the play within a play from the fifth act of Shakespeare’s A Midsummer Night’s Dream. Their performance was part of a larger 20th century tradition of playing with Shakespeare’s place in a world of mass entertainment, dominated by the rise of television.

Seminar Associates

Founded in 1966, this seminar was created to coordinate the archaeological chronologies of the regions of the Near East and the Eastern Mediterranean. In recent years, it has met from six to eight times a year to discuss new research and hear reports of fieldwork, but it will shift its emphasis toward workshops on varied subjects. A number of relevant papers were published in the American Journal of Archaeology from 1968 until 1988, and in 1992 in the Journal of the Ancient Near Eastern Society. Since then, the focus of the seminar has been widened to include all aspects of the ancient cultures of the Near East and its adjoining regions. Chairs have been Edith Pora-da (1966-1994), John Russell (1994-1996), Marc van de Mieroop (1996-1999), and Allan S. Gilbert (1999-present).

AMERICA IN A TIME OF WAR: CITY, ECONOMY AND POLITICS, 1914-1918
The University Seminar on the City • 459A
March 30–April 1, 2017
Co-sponsored by the Columbia University Seminar on the City, the Herbert H. Lehman Center for American History, and the European Institute

On April 6, 2017, the United States will mark the 100th anniversary of the country’s entry into World War I. Historians agree that this conflict represents the “primordial catastrophe” (George F. Kennan) of the 20th century, and that the United States made a crucial contribution to securing the victory of the Western Allies in the fall of 1918. It was the arrival of fresh American troops in the spring of 1918 that enabled the West to halt the German offensive and to launch a counter-offensive that finally forced Germany and Austria-Hungary to sue for peace. The City of New York played a major role in this development. Even before 1917, while the United States still officially pursued a policy of neutrality, it had become a hub from which vital deliveries of foodstuffs and other goods essential to the Allied war effort were sent across the Atlantic and where naval protection of cargo ships was assembled. New York, with Wall Street rising in dominance, was also the financial center through which the credits that were extended to Britain and France were negotiated and channeled.

This conference is intended to present both established knowledge and fresh research into these topics, and to stimulate informed exchange among scholarly panelists and the audience. In terms of genres of historical writing, it takes a comprehensive approach, concerned with larger and ultimately global issues of military and naval history as well as coalition diplomacy and national politics. In addition to a "top-down" perspective, the program is also designed to cover developments at the grass-roots level of society. It looks at the history of minorities, gender relations, charitable organizations, and of mourning and memory.

We have an outstanding group of scholars who have travelled from near and afar to contribute to this important and timely subject. Free and open to the public, the conference is aimed at stimulating discussion on this world-changing event a century ago and reminding the public of the critical place of World War I in the 21st century.

POSTERS AND PATRIOTISM: SELLING WORLD WAR I IN NEW YORK
Curator-Led Tour for Conference Participants and Guests
Michael S. Neiberg, United States Naval War College

When the United States entered World War I in April 1917, New York City’s artists and illustrators were enlisted in the war effort. Many of them worked for the federal government’s new Division of Pictorial Publicity. ‘Posters and Patriotism: Selling World War I in New York’ examines the outsourcing of posters, flyers, magazine art, sheet music covers, and other mass-produced images created by these New Yorkers to stir the American public to wartime loyalty, duty, and sacrifice. From the outset of the European conflict in 1914, however, New York had also been a city at war with itself—a place where debates about ethnic and racial loyalty, pacifism, the right to side with France, Belgium, and England or Germany, and the very meaning of patriotism spawned impassioned art for a mass audience. In rediscovering a wartime dialogue between images of conformity and dissent, Posters and Patriotism showcases over 60 examples from the World War I poster collection donated to the Museum by railroad executive and financier John W. Campbell (1880-1957) in 1943, most being exhibited for the first time, as well as the work of defiant artists in such colorful publications as The Masses, The Fatherland, and Mother Earth.
In Arabic, adab encompasses multiple fields of knowledge, resisting compartmentalization and circumscription. Adab points to both our modern sense of literature, as well as a much longer prose heritage attesting modes of proper comportment, courtly edification, and eloquence, cultivated through embodied, contingent ways of living with the authority and fragility of oral and written texts in Arabic over time. In retrospect, we could narrate a disciplinary porosity in Arabic giving way in the modern period to the disciplines we think within and between. Adab occupies a privileged position in these epistemic shifts, interleaved with its sometimes-antagonists—’ilm, shi’r, din, tasliyah (to mention but a few)—even as the meanings and practices of adab themselves change over time.

We ask: How do authors and readers inhabit different discourses and understandings of adab? How is textual authority in Arabic generated through competing disciplinary senses of interpretation and citation? How does this all relate to literary form? And when isn’t it adab anymore?

Join us for a special roundtable on “Adab and the Contemporary Arab Press” with distinguished Arab journalists working in Arabic and English in Europe and the Middle East. The roundtable will focus on how the category of adab is contested, claimed, attenuated, and/or celebrated in our time by the Arab cultural press.

Adab as an Interdisciplinary Pursuit was organized by Muhsin J. al-Musawi and co-organized by Tarek El-Ariss, Nizar F. Hermes, Elizabeth Holt and Mohammad Salama.

The Euro-Mediterranean migrant crisis prompted by the turmoil in North Africa and the Middle East continues to be discussed with increasing frequency in the media as well as in public debates, featuring experts from diverse backgrounds. Still, among the various perspectives presented, the Italian one has not been as central as its crucial role in the arrivals of both economic migrants and political refugees would warrant. As of Spring 2016, Italy was one of the chief landing points for migrants after the recent restriction of the Turkey/Greece route. Italy’s unique position in geographical and political terms as an established country of immigration – and a long history of emigration – offers materials for a fruitful reflection not just on a national case but on the entire Mediterranean scenario and its effects on the supranational stability of the E.U. This two day event addressed a wide range of topics ranging from reception to detention, asylum laws, and international agreements. On the first day a panel of experts active in Italy, the U.K. and the U.S. discussed: the governance of irregular sea crossings at the point of reception as a mix of formal and informal regimes; the post-arrival lived experience of the migrants in a context characterized by the transformation of migrant labor, the feminization of migration and migrants’ access to justice (or lack thereof); and the role of the EU Migration Agency Frontex in implementing the EU Agenda on Migration. The presentations highlighted how complex the Italian case is given the tension between those seeking to enforce strict immigration requirements, and those who insist on the state’s humanitarian responsibilities. Additionally, they showed the friction between Italy’s desire to respond to national priorities in governing its borders and post-national dynamics that are forcing Italy (along with some other Mediterranean states) into the role of a policing state for the rich heart of Europe. The vocal presence of the Pope – who has recently stated in uncompromising terms: “Migrants are not a danger-they are in danger” – and of a vast Catholic world sensitive to the needs of the migrants has further contributed to making the Italian debate diverse and dynamic.

At their core, the speakers’ presentations stressed the importance, for Italy as well as Europe, to move beyond the treatment of the situation as an emergency (Italy has been receiving immigrants in large numbers since the 1990s), and to adopt more structured solutions attentive to the interests of the multiple players involved.

On the second day, a film screening was the occasion to further debate issues of migration in the Mediterranean and its representation in the media and in the arts. Along with the panel on the first day, it provided topics of interest for consideration of global migrations at large, stressing the echoes of the U.S. Southwest border when discussing the Euro-Mediterranean migrant situation. Both parts of the program were public events designed to speak to a broad audience along with scholars and practitioners in the field. In illustrating the complexities of the migration crisis through the Italian perspective, the two-day program aims at offering Italy as a productive laboratory of ideas and experiences about migration across time and space.
A READING OF THE LIONESS IN WINTER:
WRITING AN OLD WOMAN’S LIFE* BY ANN BURACK-WEISS
The University Seminar on Narrative, Health and Social Justice • 737

MAY 11, 2017

*Script based on the book by Ann Burack-Weiss, adapted by Ann Burack-Weiss and Heather Summerhayes Cariou

ACT I: WHO’S THAT OLD WOMAN?

ACT II: INTERESTED IN BIG THINGS IN SMALL AND HAPPY WAYS

ACT III: FIERCE WITH REALITY

As author Ann Burack-Weiss approached 80 and the territory of old age, she looked to the late-life works of beloved women authors for guidance and inspiration—among them Maya Angelou, Colette, Simone de Beauvoir, Doris Grumbach, M. F. K. Fisher, Doris Lessing, Mary Oliver, Adrienne Rich, May Sarton, and Florida Scott-Maxwell. The Lioness in Winter sets Ann’s courageous personal reflections in the light of powerful passages from these women, who turned their experiences of aging into art—giving us an essential companion for older women and those who care for them.

FEATURING

Penny Fuller as Collette, Dianna Athill, and May Sarton

Two-time Tony nominee and six-time Emmy nominee, winning the Emmy for The Elephant Man. Extensive television credits. Notable film appearances include All the President’s Men. Recently seen in the celebrated production of Sunday in the Park with George alongside Jake Gyllenhaal.

Anita Gillette as Doris Lessing, Joan Didion, Edith Wharton, and Florida Scott-Maxwell

Tony-nominated for Best Actress in Neil Simon’s Chapter Two. Fourteen shows on Broadway. Best known for playing Mona the mistress in Mommie Dearest or Tina Fey’s mother on 30 Rock, or Jack Klugman’s wife on Quincy, M.E. She recently appeared on Modern Family and Blue Bloods. Numerous film and TV credits. Record fifty appearances on The Johnny Carson Show as a foil for the Master.

Vinie Burrows as MFK Fisher, Toni Morrison, Doris Grumbach, and Alice Walker

Actor, Storyteller, Activist. Distinguished Recipient of the Paul Robeson Award. Over 6,000 performances of her acclaimed one-woman show around the globe. Seven shows on Broadway, including her debut as a child actress opposite the legendary Helen Hayes. Extensive off-Broadway credits, including the original cast of The Blacks by Jean Genet.

Heather Summerhayes Cariou as the Author

Fifteen year career as a stage actress in Canada, including Stratford Shakespeare Festival. Appeared off-Broadway at Washington’s Ford Theatre in Mountain. Author of Canadian best-seller Screwy Foxes: A Sister’s Memoir (Globe and Mail best 100 books of 2006, top 40 finalist for Canada Reads 2000). Recent graduate of Columbia’s Narrative Medicine Program.

Ann Burack-Weiss as herself

Author of six books, most notably The Caregiver’s Tale: Loss and Renewal in Memoirs of Family Life. She has taught two generations of students at Columbia University’s School of Social Work and is now associate faculty in Columbia’s Program in Narrative Medicine.

The following pages are a listing of the 2016-2017 University Seminars, with their topics and speakers. The seminars are listed in order of their Seminar Number, which roughly follows their chronological founding. Some of our seminars are still going strong after nearly 75 years while new ones continue to be formed. One seminar was inaugurated last year. Seminars sometimes stop meeting, temporarily or permanently, for practical or intellectual reasons. Our seminars span a wide range of interests, from contemporary and historical topics in religion, literature, and law, to technical and administrative issues in contemporary society, to area studies, Shakespeare, and the sciences.

Seminars active in the 2016-2017 academic year only are listed by seminar number and name in this directory. Seminars are also listed alphabetically in the index.

STUDIES IN RELIGION 405 • Founded: 1945

The approaches to religion in this seminar range from the philosophical through the anthropological to the historical and comparative. We concern ourselves with religion in all of its manifestations—ancient and modern, primitive and civilized, heretical and orthodox, individual and cosmic. The guiding thread is whatever subjects are uppermost in the minds of those composing the membership at a given time. Since members come from different disciplines as well as different traditions and have a variety of personal orientations, we are assured maximum openness and flexibility.

EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY EUROPEAN CULTURE 417 • Founded: 1962

This interdisciplinary seminar hosts leading national and regional scholars who present works-in-progress that explore aspects of eighteenth-century European culture of vital interest and concern to the wider field of eighteenth-century studies. Like our guest speakers, our membership is drawn from a wide variety of institutions and disciplines: history, literature, philosophy, political science, music, history of science, and art, as well as national traditions. The Seminar’s offerings are eclectic, but from time to time our Seminar has hosted special events such as symposia on the 18th-century reception of Classical, Hellenistic, and Late Antique texts (2003) and the intellectual origins of freedom of speech (2007–2008). Proceedings from the latter recently appeared as a collection of essays edited by former Chair Elizabeth Powers, Freedom of Speech: The History of an Idea (Bucknell University Press, 2013). Most recently, our Seminar has co-sponsored, with the Seminar on Early Modern France, a series of roundtables on new directions in eighteenth-century studies under the rubric of “Literature and History in Dialogue.” Past roundtables have been devoted to concepts of authorship (Fall 2010), eighteenth-century science studies (Spring 2011), and comparative colonialisms and orientalisms (Fall 2011). 2012-2013 was the Seminar’s 50th year in operation, a benchmark celebrated the following year with a two-day conference.

Chair: Professor Kathleen Lubey • Rapporteur: Ms. Katherine Bergevin

ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT 423 • Founded: 1951

This seminar addresses issues related to the structure and management of purposeful human enterprises. The membership is highly interdisciplinary. In addition to university and visiting scholars, distinguished individuals from industry and government participate regularly. The seminar selects themes for deliberation for one or more academic years. Recent themes have been: concept formation in developing theories of management; how should managers be educated, with implications for business administration curricula; managing increasing complexity, scale and change; measurement in management; and currently, managing in times of fundamental transformations. The consistent long-range effort has been toward an operationally verifiable theory of organizing and managing, including managers’ education and training, and the emerging effects of globalization.

AMERICAN STUDIES • 429 • Founded: 1954
The concern of this seminar is the history, literature, and culture of the United States, focusing on the period from the nineteenth century to the present. Recent subjects have ranged from Margaret Fuller to the Hawaiian sovereignty movement, from Asian American fashion designers to letters from former slaves who settled in Liberia. A number of presentations have positioned the United States in transnational or comparative contexts. The seminar’s strength is the variety of fields represented by its intellectually active participants. The very lively discussion periods are one of the most appealing aspects of this seminar.

MEDIEVAL STUDIES 431 • Founded: 1954

This seminar addresses subjects of common interest to all branches of medieval studies. The seminar particularly encourages interdisciplinary topics and approaches, which will stimulate discussions of issues in the study of medieval culture. One of the great advantages of the seminar is that it brings together representatives of medieval disciplines, from Columbia and elsewhere, who otherwise would have only rare opportunities to talk about questions of common interest.

THE CITY 459A • Founded: 1962

This seminar undertakes a wide-ranging consideration of the city—its history, functions, problems, and glories. Sessions are devoted to urban cultural and social history, and to the meaning of physical form and landscape of both American and world-wide cities. The heterogeneous nature of the seminar’s membership is reflected in the variety of subjects that the meetings address.

LAW AND POLITICS 465 • Founded: 1963

Members of the seminar investigate the legal, political, and institutional aspects of society both as they function in reality and as they should function according to theory. The investigation is both global and timeless, although European and American interests seem to dominate. Lectures and discussions range from classical Greece, Rome and Israel, through medieval Europe, Islam and Asia, to modern and contemporary societies. Aspects of Roman, canon, Talmudic, common, and Islamic laws are examined. The majority of the lectures are presented by the members of the seminar, most of whom are academics in history, political science or law, or professionals who have become editors. One or two papers each year are presented by visiting scholars.

KNOWLEDGE, TECHNOLOGY, AND SOCIAL SYSTEMS  467 • Founded: 1966

Technologies, scientific transformations, and new areas of knowledge are continuously, and rapidly, being introduced. These developments are transforming social systems around the world. We have seen networked computers rapidly converging with telephones and TV into globally pervasive digital communications systems. These systems—and the emerging New Media they create—are increasingly impacting what and how we communicate with each other, as well as how we write history and interact among ourselves. The opportunities and threats these and other systems pose to personal and global quality of life, and even to human survival, are very real and relatively little understood. This seminar will consider these aspects, as well as alternative social systems that may lead to a better future for humankind. This seminar was formerly called Computers, Man, and Society.

SOUTH ASIA • Founded: 1964

The University Seminar on South Asia seeks to broaden and deepen understanding about the region of South Asia by providing a forum to discuss ongoing research as well as special topics related to the complex and multiple societies of South Asia both past and present. Drawing together scholars from many different disciplines, the seminar fosters cross-disciplinary discussion and perspectives on a broad range of questions and concerns. In recent years, the seminar has deliberated on such issues as: religion and politics, the political function of violence in South Asia, national integration, language and community, South Asian identities in pre-colonial times, religious iconography, and many other topics. The University Seminar on South Asia is a merger of the University Seminar on Tradition and Change in South and Southeast Asia (founded in 1964) and the University Seminar on Indology (founded in 1993).

THE ANCIENT NEAR EAST 479 • Founded: 1966

This seminar was created to coordinate the archaeological chronologies of the regions of the Near East and the Eastern Mediterranean. It meets from six to eight times a year to discuss new research and hear reports of recent fieldwork. A number of relevant papers were published in the American Journal of Archaeology from 1968 until 1988, and in 1992 in the Journal of the Ancient Near Eastern Society. Since then, the focus of the seminar has been widened to include all aspects of the ancient cultures of the Near East and its adjoining regions.

STudies in Modern Italy 483 • Founded: 1966

This seminar is concerned with political, social, cultural, and religious aspects of Italian life from 1815 to the present. In recent years, the seminar has stressed an interdisciplinary approach to Italian studies, increasing the participation of anthropologists and scholars of art, film, and literature. The seminar generally meets on the second Friday of the month, from September to May, to discuss a paper presented by a member or an invited speaker. Papers cover a wide range of topics, approaches, and methodologies. The seminar occasionally holds a day long conference or a more restricted symposium to explore a topic in depth.

EARLY AMERICAN HISTORY AND CULTURE 491 • Founded: 1966

This seminar explores a variety of topics each year from the founding of the European colonies in the late sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries, until the demise of the Revolutionary generation in the second quarter of the nineteenth century. The program tries to strike a balance between presentations by established scholars in the field and younger people who are just getting established. It also tries to do justice to the broad interests of colonial specialists, ranging from traditional political and constitutional themes through newer interests in demography, gender, race, and highly refined methodologies. Although the focus of the seminar has primarily been historical, participation by scholars in literature, religion, and other fields is increasingly encouraged.

POLLUTION AND WATER RESOURCES: SCIENTIFIC AND INSTITUTIONAL ASPECTS 495A • Founded: 1968

The purpose of this seminar is to explore the effects pollution and environmental regulation on water and related environmental resources. Proceedings of the seminar, collections of the lectures, are published yearly. To date, forty one volumes have been published. Besides these volumes, the seminar has contributed over forty articles written in seven languages abroad and in the United States. The research institute of the seminar, the American Academy of Ocean Sciences, conducted research actively from 1969 to 1985. During the past thirty years, thirty-three graduate students have participated in the seminar and their participation has been credited toward their studies.

ECONOMIC HISTORY 503 • Founded: 1969

The concerns of this seminar are wide ranging in time, place, and method. Emphasis is on the logic of European and American economic growth from feudal times forward with regular, but less frequent, contributions on Latin America, Asia, and Africa. Topics range from microeconomic studies of firms undergoing rapid technical change and households changing their interaction between home and market to more macroeconomic topics concerned with national and regional economic growth performance, the economics of imperialism, and the political economy of the Great Depression. Given the breadth of the seminar’s membership and interests, comparative economic history is often a central element in seminar discussions. Pre-circulation of papers permits vigorous discussion.

THE MIDDLE EAST 525 • Founded: 1971

The seminar usually meets once a month during the academic year. A prominent expert from here or abroad, commonly from the Middle East, leads a three and a half hour discussion at each meeting, assuring ample time for serious dialogue on focused issues. The seminar provides a forum for the exchange of ideas and experiences by Middle East experts in various spheres—business, banking and investment, federal service, the foundations, the media, and the liberal professions as well as academia. The seminar has become a medium for carefully defined and informed evaluation of stubborn problems in a region that symbolizes persistent instability and proliferating crises. Detailed minutes are circulated to participating members for use without attribution to uphold the confidentiality of the discussion.

APPETITIVE BEHAVIOR 529 • Founded: 1972

This seminar is comprised of professors, research scientists, and physicians from institutions of higher learning and industry in the greater New York area with a common interest in the biological and behavioral bases of appetitive behavior. Four major areas of interest are found within the group: 1) the control of food and fluid intake in man and animals and their effects on variation in body composition; 2) disorders with links to ingestive behavior such as obesity, bulimia, anorexia nervosa, and diabetes; 3) the role of the brain from pharmacological, physiological, neuroimaging, and neuroanatomical perspectives on the control of ingestive behavior; 4) cognitive, social, and environmental controls of ingestive behavior.

The seminar thus combines interests in basic control mechanisms with clinical applications.

CULTURE, POWER, BOUNDARIES 531 • Founded: 1972

The Culture, Power, Boundaries Seminar is a forum for work and work-in-progress that strives for a critical analysis of contemporary power relations at local and global scales and how such power relations affect the analysis, reproduction, and transformation of inequality and its cultural expressions. The seminar began forty years ago with a focus on immigration and developed into a broad forum for critical social science. While the majority of seminar members are anthropologists, and presentations tend to focus on case studies, the seminar continues to welcome, as both guests and speakers, other social scientists interested in investigating the power dimension of cultural formations and the cultural aspects of inequality.

THE HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY OF SCIENCE 533 • Founded: 1973

This seminar is devoted to exploring substantive as well as methodological issues in the history and philosophy of science. Science is construed broadly and the issues considered range from epistemic and historiographic questions to issues of relevance and accountability. Topics include the presuppositions and practice of a range of life sciences, earth sciences, and social sciences as well as the physical sciences and mathematics. In the physical sciences its interests range from antiquity to contemporary quantum theory. In the life sciences and social sciences the fields considered include various forms of historical, evolutionary inquiry (in biology, geology, and the historical social sciences), biotechnology and ecology, economics, psychology and cognitive science, and interpretive social inquiry. The membership of this seminar includes scientists, philosophers, and historians. Most sessions take place in conjunction with the New York City History of Science Working Group.

IRISH STUDIES 535 • Founded: 1973

This seminar serves as an interdisciplinary forum on all aspects and periods of Irish culture. Seminar participants come from a wide variety of fields: history, literature, art history, film studies, political science, sociology, anthropology, music, and folklore. These scholars bring to any topic under discussion a diversity of background which is stimulating and informative for all present. The concern for Irish studies as a field of scholarly inquiry is reflected in the collegial sharing of information about resources and repositories for research in the field.

CINEMA AND INTERDISCIPLINARY INTERPRETATION 539 • Founded: 1974

The seminar draws from the faculty of New York-area universities and independent scholars; regular participants come from as far away as Baltimore. Attendance varies from twenty to forty-five people, with thirty being average. Half of the speakers are from within the seminar, half are from outside. They present works in progress that generally address important groundbreaking topics in film and media studies within an inter-disciplinary perspective. Most sessions have a respondent, often a regular member of the seminar. The seminar has an international reputation among film and media scholars and has become the center for ongoing face-to-face scholarly exchanges in the field.

OTTOMAN AND TURKISH STUDIES 551 • Founded: 1974

From its inception, this seminar adopted an interdisciplinary approach to Turkic studies, and its members represent many fields. At the same time, their interests span more than thirteen centuries. In most years, the program covers a selection of topics reflecting current research of members. Special anniversaries such as the Atatürk centennial (1981–1982), the sixtieth anniversary of the Turkish Republic (1983–1984), and the traveling exhibition, The Age of Sultan Süleyman the Magnificent (1987–1988), however, have provided themes around which all papers or a series of papers have been centered. Discussion on papers presented—no matter what their topic—has shown that dialogue between, for example, political scientist and art historian, medievalist and modernist, can be both stimulating and productive.

DRUGS AND SOCIETY 553 • Founded: 1975

This seminar provides a forum for the scholarly exchange of information among key representatives of the chemical dependency research, treatment, prevention, and policy development communities. It seeks to address the important and complex questions relating to the root causes of chemical dependency and abuse, to examine and evaluate epidemiological studies, to determine the effectiveness of various treatment and prevention strategies, and to discuss the wisdom and value of current international, national, and local policies. Membership is comprised of prominent researchers, established leaders in the treatment and prevention fields, and government policy makers. Speakers in the seminar are drawn from the membership itself and by invitation from other institutions.

ARABIC STUDIES 559 • Founded: 1977

The concerns of this seminar are interdisciplinary and humanistic. In addition to Arabic language and literature, the range of interests includes topics of significance for Islamic studies: religion, philosophy, science, law and history of the Muslim world, and modern social and cultural history. The seminar affords an opportunity to members and guest speakers to discuss research in progress. Because the members come from several disciplines, the substantive discussions draw upon various fields to expand the sources, help reformulate questions, and anticipate future publications.

COGNITIVE AND BEHAVIORAL NEUROSCIENCE 603 • Founded: 1986

For more than 100 years, comparative psychologists have sought to understand the evolution of human intelligence. New paradigms for studying cognitive processes in animals—in particular symbol use and memory—have, for the first time, allowed psychologists and neuroscientists to compare higher thought processes in animals and human beings. New imaging approaches have also facilitated exploring the neural basis of behavior and both animals and humans. Questions concerning the nature of animal and human cognition have defined the themes of this seminar whose members include specialists in cognition, ethology, philosophy and neuroscience.

BUDDHIST STUDIES 629 • Founded: 1990

The seminar discusses issues and ongoing research in Buddhist Studies, as well as the interface between Buddhist Studies and other humanistic and scientific disciplines. Buddhism has been a powerful cultural and intellectual, as well as religious, current in all of the Asian civilizations. Its manifestations engage the scholarly concern of members of a wide range of disciplines: religious studies (itself an interdisciplinary enterprise), philosophy, psychology, history, sociology, anthropology, comparative literature, art history, and political science, among others. The seminar is focused not on a narrow range of issues concerning the Buddhist religions, but on a broad range of philosophical, cultural, social, and scientific subjects arising from the long and rich historical experience of the numerous Buddhist civilizations.

RELIGION IN AMERICA 661 • Founded: 1997

This seminar explores the role of religion in American society from cross-disciplinary perspectives: history, anthropology, literature, sociology, theology, material culture, etc. Both "religion" and "America" are broadly defined: "religion" takes into account multicultural and multifarious religious expressions in an increasingly pluralistic setting; "America" includes not merely the United States but Canada and the Caribbean as well. The members of the seminar are particularly interested in examining the religiously rich environment of New York City.

GLOBALIZATION, LABOR, AND POPULAR STRUGGLES 671 • Founded: 1998

The seminar seeks to clarify the boundaries of what might be broadly understood as labor politics and the labor movement by examining theoretical and historical developments in order to clarify what has been learned and what needs to be learned in the current world-historical moment of global capitalist reorganization. Included in the purview of the seminar are broader issues in popular politics as well as forms of popular action that are often identified by such alternative labels as "social movements" or "contentious" politics. Presentations, by specialists from the academic and labor communities, focus on issues in contemporary labor and popular politics, on a thematic basis, in settings around the world, and bring to bear a strongly comparative focus, which challenges a common division between specialists on labor in the industrialized world and labor in less developed areas. Debate is facilitated by the provision of papers in advance.

LANGUAGE AND COGNITION 681 • Founded: 2000

What can the study of language contribute to our understanding of human nature? This question motivates research spanning many intellectual constituencies, for its range exceeds the scope of any one of the core disciplines. The technical study of language has developed across anthropology, electrical engineering, linguistics, neurology, philosophy, psychology, and sociology, and influential research of the recent era of cognitive science has occurred when disciplinary boundaries were transcended. The seminar is a forum for convening this research community of broadly differing expertise, within and beyond the University. As a meeting ground for regular discussion of current events and fundamental questions, the University Seminar on Language and Cognition will direct its focus to the latest breakthroughs and the developing concerns of the scientific community studying language.

MEMORY AND SLAVERY 68g • Founded: 2001

This seminar began as a conversation on the continued effects of slavery in the United States. In recent years we have built upon that initial conversation, and now members and guests may choose to discuss one or both implicit meanings of our title: how the United States might more carefully and fully recognize the effects of slavery on all its citizens today, and how our memories of earlier difficulties might enslave any one of us, trapping us in the past and making it difficult for us to grow into the present.

MODERN GREEK 703 • Founded: 2005

The seminar’s title emphasizes the language—Modern Greek—over the metropolitan nation-state, Modern Greece. By so doing, the seminar uses the enduring and versatile nature of the language as a symbol for broader themes that, both diachronically and synchronically, depict the tension between sameness and difference, between the continuities and discontinuities that comprise the Hellenic world. The seminar does not limit its focus to Modern Greece, even though it remains its foremost concern, instead it seeks to provide a forum for original interdisciplinary perspectives on Byzantine, Ottoman, and Modern Greece and the Greek diaspora. Seminar participants from a wide variety of fields consider all aspects of the post-classical Greek world as well as the reception and creative appropriation of the classical Greek tradition both in Greece and abroad. The seminar examines Greek relations with Western Europe, the Balkans, the Mediterranean, the Caucasus and the Middle East, tracing also the cultural presence of historic Greek communities in these areas as well as in more recent diasporas, in the United States and Australia. The seminar also examines the presence of diverse communities within Greece.

EARLY MODERN FRANCE 707 • Founded: 2005

The focus of the seminar is the cultural and intellectual history of early modern France (from 1500 to 1800) and the approach is interdisciplinary. The seminar includes literature scholars, historians, and philosophers. It meets at least once a month. The current format, which has proven very successful, consists in circulating a relatively short piece written by the invited speaker among the group members and discussing it at the meeting. Thus, instead of a formal talk followed by a few questions, there is an in-depth, 90-minute conversation.

LITERARY THEORY 711 • Founded: 2005

This seminar has had a long and distinguished history at Columbia. Originally called Theory of Literature (469), it was revived under its current title in 2006 with a view to pursuing the relations between literature, philosophy, and the politics that pervades our cultural production and its study. For some time now, literary studies has been engaged in wider theoretical approaches to texts and to the very idea of literature and criticism, and the seminar hopes to take philosophical stock of this tendency as well as to try to bring to it, whenever possible, more creative and more rigorous angles. These goals will initially be pursued broadly and ecumenically and should it turn out that one or other themes surfaces, which demands our sustained focus, the seminar will very likely take it up for a whole year, approaching it from different angles. For the most part, one of the members will circulate a paper, introduced for the seminar by another member, but occasionally, we will invite a speaker from outside the membership.

CULTURAL MEMORY

The University Seminar on Cultural Memory began in 2005 as an interdisciplinary colloquium welcoming graduate students and faculty from Columbia and its neighbors. The Seminar, incepted in 2007, builds upon this already-established community and aims to further develop a vibrant interdisciplinary dialogue on contemporary issues of cultural and collective memory, including but not limited to traumatic memory, collective and national forgetting, memorialization and museology, historical consciousness and historiography, embodied memory and performance, archive and testimony. The Seminar meets monthly and, in addition to discussing chapters and works-in-progress, hosts a series of distinguished visiting speakers, working in close cooperation with relevant departments and institutes at Columbia.

INJURY PREVENTION AND CONTROL

Established by the faculty from the Department of Anesthesiology in the College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Department of Epidemiology in the Mailman School of Public Health, this interdisciplinary colloquium welcomes participation by the Columbia University Faculty, the professional community and key stakeholders in the New York metropolitan area. This seminar addresses a wide range of issues in the field of injury prevention and control, and provides an opportunity for seminar participants to analyze and evaluate new and continuing issues of growing significance with respect to injury epidemiology. Current topics of interest include motor vehicle crashes and pedestrian injuries, violence, emergency and disaster preparedness, and the implications of aging on health and safety. The seminar provides a framework for a multidisciplinary scholarly exchange of ideas on emerging issues, research, practice and policies affecting injury prevention and control in the 21st century.

The Comparative Philosophy Seminar seeks to advance constructive philosophical projects by bringing together scholars with training in diverse areas of Asian thought (mostly the Indian and Chinese) and Western Philosophy. Comparison in this context is not employed to loan authority to one set of obscure discoveries by revealing its resonances with the works of others, deemed less obscure. Nor does it sociologize philosophy in search of general laws of human cultural and intellectual development. Rather, the intent is to explicate, and employ, the fullness of an expanded philosophical toolset—and see how that works. The seminar ordinarily invites respondents who are versed in the relevant field of philosophical inquiry, but who are not necessarily specialists in Asian thought. In order to facilitate an ongoing conversation, seminar meetings for a given year are loosely organized around a very general theme, which speakers are asked to address when possible.

THEORY AND HISTORY OF MEDIA

The University Seminar on the Theory and History of Media brings together scholars from the humanities and social sciences to examine emerging concepts in media theory. Media, in this conception, refers to material technologies that (re)produce, store, and transmit information—a conception broad enough that allows us to move from, say, the role of print technologies in early modern Europe, through spirit photography to the emergence of contemporary digital media. We are especially interested in the ways in which technologies shape and are shaped by cultural practices, and social sensibilities, and we consider a historical dimension as central to this effort. There is nothing so powerful in understanding the novelty and dynamism of contemporary media as looking at the introduction of earlier technologies whose technical and social influence was yet to be understood. At the same time, we are also committed to moving beyond the specifics of media in the U.S. to incorporate the different histories and trajectories of media in Europe and elsewhere. Finally, we intend this to be beyond any one disciplinary approach and each year is organized around a specific theme that sets the frame for questions and conversation.

_Columbia University • THE UNIVERSITY SEMINARS_
HISTORY, REDRESS, AND RECONCILIATION • 729 • Founded: 2009

Historical redress continues to occupy public and political debates as well as scholarly research. The study of human rights abuses and the ways in which redress addresses past injustices has gained broad recognition across a wide range of academic fields. Despite, or perhaps because of this widespread attention, there has been no systematic attempt to integrate what remain largely disconnected efforts into a trans-disciplinary enterprise let alone paradigmatic approach. In short, the history and the contemporary culture of redress remain a scholarly subject matter that is still in search of its own field. The objective of this seminar is to forge a more structured exchange among scholars and practitioners who engage a set of issues that are yet to self-identify as an academic field, and is addressed in different disciplinary spaces. The seminar provides a forum for interdisciplinary work on issues at the intersection of history, memory and contemporary politics with particular emphasis on redressing past wrongs and gross violations of human rights. It encompasses questions among others of transitional justice, cultural resolution, and reconciliation. Its main principle revolves round the question of how history and memory inform contemporary politics, in particular around conflict and post conflict societies.

"Sites of Cinema" takes a new approach to the question of cinema at the moment when cinema is said to be in decline, even in some accounts said to be facing its "death." At this moment, when are focused on a convergence of moving image forms into a single delivery system we take up divergence over convergence, a divergence. Alternative to André Bazin’s question ‘What is Cinema?’ “Sites of Cinema” will ask “Where is Cinema?” Where has it been seen to be and where will it be spaced in the future—as theoretical construct, national culture, material object, artistic work, social practice and space of exhibition. Cinema has moved and is still moving—from theatrical stages to museum walls, in and on buildings as well as within historical nations and regions of the world. “Sites of Cinema” signals our interest in site-specific cinemas plural and also cinema as a total apparatus—the “cinema of the mind” for the mass audience.

NARRATIVE, HEALTH, AND SOCIAL JUSTICE 737 • Founded: 2010

This interdisciplinary and inter-institutional seminar explores the connection between narrative, health, and social justice. If disease, violence, terror, war, poverty and oppression all manifest themselves in narrative, then it is equally true that resistance, justice, healing, activism, and collectivity can be products of a narrative- based approach to ourselves and the world. Narrative understanding helps unpack the complex power relations between North and South, state and worker, disabled body and able-body, broad-earner and child-bearer, subject and researcher, patient and provider as well as self and the other. The seminar will draw from such fields as journalism, performance arts, law, public health, trauma studies, anthropology, sociology, literary studies, medicine, writing, and cultural studies. The common thread will be the narratives we tell as individuals, families, communities, and nations that situate our experience in social, political, and cultural contexts, and that express in so many ways our search for justice in our world and for our world. Our aim is to broaden the mandate of each of our disciplines, challenging each of us to bring a critical, self-reflective eye to our scholarship, teaching, practice, and organizing. How are the stories we tell manifestations of social injustice? How can we transform such stories into narratives of justice, health, and change?

COLUMBIA SCHOOL LINGUISTICS 739 • Founded: 2011

The seminar series continues the line of research established by Professor of Linguistics William Diver. The aim in this approach, as contrasted with formal linguistics, is to account for observed language use, with authentic text as the main source of data. For grammar, this typically entails hypotheses about linguistic signals and their meanings; for phonology, hypotheses about the relevant phonetic characteristics of phonological units. The roles of communication and a human factor are explicitly acknowledged as supporting the explanations offered. The series was begun in 1968 by Diver for the benefit of graduate students working on doctoral theses under his guidance. Since his death in 1995, the series has continued under the auspices of the Columbia School Linguistic Society, with participants presenting analyses or work in progress. Occasionally, it hosts by invitation presenters doing compatible work outside the Columbia School tradition. Work coming out of the seminar has led to numerous conference presentations and publications.

RELIGION AND WRITING 751 • Founded: 2011
The seminar was founded to create a research group dedicated to the investigation of literacy and writing in world religions. Its focus is the comparative study of the roles of literacy vis-à-vis the uses of writing as a form of communication technology in religious traditions. Approaching the relationship between religion and writing through the lenses of literacy and communication technology, the seminar strives to address all media—from inscriptions on stone and clay tablets to internet websites—and all literary genres—from myths and commentaries to divine revelations and hymns—as well as the theoretical and practical implications of the absence, or rejection, of writing.

WORK/FAMILY IN THE 21ST CENTURY 755 • Founded: 2012
The American family is changing, but work/family policies have not kept up with those changes. The focus of this seminar is to: 1) review recent demographic trends and their implications for American families; 2) consider the range of work/family policies and their rationales; 3) learn about new approaches to work/family policy, drawing on examples from innovative cities and states as well as other countries; 4) discuss the politics of work/family policies and what is needed to influence adoption of new policies, particularly at the federal level; 5) identify knowledge gaps and agendas for further research. The goal of this seminar is to advance knowledge on this important topic and to promote further research collaborations among Columbia faculty, and between Columbia faculty and outside experts.

GLOBAL MENTAL HEALTH 757 • Founded: 2012

Historically, the global health agenda has prioritized communicable and non-communicable diseases other than mental health; however, the data now unequivocally and overwhelmingly point to the essential need to make mental health an integral component of the global health agenda. This will require innovative thinking, multidisciplinary collaboration, and strategic initiatives. The GMH University Seminar is supported by faculty from across multiple departments at Columbia; it provides the opportunity for intellectual discourse on the essential issues in global mental health; and it serves as a seminal component of the multidisciplinary program in global mental health at Columbia University. The GMH University Seminar aims to facilitate professional collaborations and contribute to the field by hosting programs that address and advance the scientific, policy, and practical aspects of making mental health a core component of the global health agenda.

BEYOND FRANCE 763 • Founded: 2014

This University Seminar focuses on the transnational material, intellectual and symbolic exchanges that have characterized the regions that once composed successive French empires since the seventeenth century. The seminar will not be an exercise in colonial or imperial history, organized around the opposition between « center » and « periphery », but rather an exploration of connections and lines of fragmentation within that space. The goal of the seminar will be to explore not only France’s global expansion and retraction in the modern period, but, no less significantly, the after-lives of French empire in various post-colonies, networks, and institutions. Our goal is to map a distinct—but not isolated—world within the “globe,” one conditioned but not defined by France, its empires, its language, and its ecumene. Inherently interdisciplinary, the seminar will bring together scholars in the humanities and the social sciences from Europe, North America, Asia, and Africa in order to understand these complex exchanges that reach « Beyond France ».

LOGIC, PROBABILITY, AND GAMES 765 • Founded: 2014

The seminar is concerned with applying formal methods to fundamental issues, with an emphasis on probabilistic reasoning, decision theory and games. In this context “logic” is broadly interpreted as covering applications that involve formal representations. The topics of interest have been researched within a very broad spectrum of different disciplines, including philosophy (logic and epistemology), statistics, economics, and computer science. The seminar is intended to bring together scholars from different fields of research so as to illuminate problems of common interest from different perspectives. Throughout each academic year, meetings are regularly presented by the members of the seminar and distinguished guest speakers.

HUMAN-ANIMAL STUDIES 759 • Founded: 2014

The University Seminar on Human-Animal Studies is open to faculty and professional membership in the field of Human-Animal Studies. Vibrant new scholarship is emerging in this area of work. The field’s focus is on how humans and (other) animals have interacted across cultures and histories; how the protein, work, and products derived from animals have contributed to human projects; how cross-species relationships have shaped human histories; and how animals’ imaginative and aesthetic roles in cultures are connected to the living presence of animals. Work in this field tends to be interdisciplinary, drawing on the social sciences and the humanities as well as on the already interdisciplinary fields of environmental and posthumanist studies.

INDIGENOUS STUDIES 771 • Founded: 2014

Indigenous Peoples’ claims for retributive justice are leading to debates over restoration, and the legal, political and moral consequences of the acknowledgement of past wrongs. What are the ramifications of the right to self-determination for Indigenous Peoples in a contemporary world? Collective and individual identities and human rights may be in tension with each other. How are these to be reconciled? Gender and generational differentializations may underscore not just individual rifts, but potentially broader conflict within groups themselves. What could be a human rights response to such conflicts? Economic interests of majorities are put forward to justify displacement, dispossession and other violations of Indigenous Peoples’ rights. And the hunger for the world’s still unexplored natural resources that reside on Indigenous Peoples’ lands motivates major decisions of governments and the private sector, with unclear commitment to benefit sharing and even the human rights of Indigenous Peoples. How are conflicting claims and rights between Indigenous Peoples and the dominant society to be resolved? What should be the role of the state in these conflicts? Is the dichotomy between western knowledge and indigenous knowledge a true dichotomy? Can one think “scientifically” and yet be open to an indigenous worldview? Does the adoption of Western epistemologies, ontologies, and methodologies really entail the wholesale rejection of their indigenous counterparts and vice-versa? What is the role of expressive culture and aesthetics in these inquiries? How do they reveal and help us think through indigenous sovereignty or its pursuit, indigenous epistemologies, inter- and intra-community conflict over definitions of identity, social roles, relationships to the physical world and political organization and action? This seminar provides the opportunity for sharing research on these many critical issues, which are challenging and unsettling scholars, researchers, and practitioners in and around this field. Discussions revolve around contentious and emerging issues in the field of indigenous studies and research and contribute to the advancement of the field.

THE INTEGRATIVE STUDY OF ANIMAL BEHAVIOR 773 • Founded: 2014

Animal behavior is the ultimate complex and integrated trait, shaped not only by gene, protein, neural, endocrine interactions, but also by interactions among animals of the same and even different species. This Seminar takes an integrative approach to exploring animal behavior by bringing together scientists that work in the lab and field to study neuroscience, behavioral ecology, behavioral endocrinology, functional genomics, population genetics, comparative physiology, and more.

THE FUTURE OF AGING RESEARCH 775 • Founded: 2014

Human aging is the result of biopsychosocial forces. The interactions among these three sources — biology, culture and the aging individual — provide for variation within and between individuals. The range and limits of the modifiability of aging trajectories in light of this interactive nature of aging is the main focus of this Seminar which will draw from a wide range of disciplines — from biology, neurology, medicine and public health to psychology, sociology, economics, political science, demographics, and engineering.

AFFECT STUDIES 777 • Founded: 2015

This seminar seeks to bring together scholars in the fields and subfields that have been touched by a growing interest in emotional or affective experience, whether understood as embodied or incorporeal, emotional or impersonal, quantifiable or escaping measurement. This inter/multidisciplinary seminar on affect will incorporate a wide range of approaches and topics across disciplines and periods. We aim to provide a forum for a discussion of affect in the arts, sciences, history, psychology, philosophy, ecology, queer/feminist studies and social theory, among others, as well as a means to historicize how affect and emotion have served in religious, social, and political contexts in different periods and locales, from Antiquity to contemporary life. We feel that fostering interdisciplinary exchange on the question of affect is vital for understanding the many valences of affect studies’ vocabulary and concerns.

DISABILITY, CULTURE, AND SOCIETY 779 • Founded: 2015

This seminar provides a venue for scholars working in disability studies—which examines the social, political, cultural, and historical factors that define disability—to interrogate the current state of the field and identify the most crucial problems and concerns for its future. Critical scholarship around disability questions is essential because it builds a platform to interrogate charged ethical and political questions about the meaning of aesthetics and cultural representation, identity, and dynamics of social inclusion and/or exclusion. Over the past 15 years, disability studies has grown into a vibrant interdisciplinary arena, engaging some of the most pressing debates of our time: questions about the beginning and end of life, prenatal testing, abortion, euthanasia, eugenics; definitions of mental health and wellness; accommodation in schools, public transportation, and the workplace, technologies for the medical correction and “cure” of the non-normative body; disease, wartime injuries, post-traumatic stress, and healthcare.

SUSTAINABLE FINANCE 783 • Founded: 2016

The transition to a sustainable economic system looms as one of the key challenges of the present generation. This seminar brings together academically-minded practitioners and practically-oriented academics to explore how the financial sector can play an essential and constructive role in funding this transition. The seminar touches on a variety of topics including social impact investing, the integration of environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into analysis, the financing of the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals, and financial system integrity. It also explores the limits to sustainable development policies.
