Dear Colleagues,

As we emerge from the hibernation of intersession, I wish you all a Happy New Year and I hope that we may all continue to share the work of safeguarding a peaceful, civil year, both at Columbia and in our many different outside worlds.

Here, we are focused as always on The Seminars, and on our obligation to maintain continuity with their past while keeping them as open as possible to the future. Consider for instance the Schoff Lectures. This past fall we had the great honor of sharing three evenings with Edward Mendelson, who took us through a single book, Mrs. Dalloway by Virginia Woolf, in three successive weeks through three different aspects of the novel. “Medicine, Empire, Love: The Inner Life of Mrs. Dalloway” will appear as the 2017 Schoff Lectures, to be published by Columbia University Press. The 2018 Schoff Lectures will be by our distinguished Music Department colleague Fred Lerdahl.

And what of the fall of 2019?

For those Schoff Lectures we will celebrate the 75th anniversary of the founding of The Seminars by Frank Tannenbaum, in the closing years of World War II. We are looking to produce a volume that will include a history of The Seminars based on our searchable digital archive of minutes from seminars and of correspondence from my four predecessors as Director. This history will be complemented by histories of separate seminars, written by chairs and members of those seminars.

Thinking that perhaps this would be a lot of work for a lot of you, I did my own essay of a sort, and began to study the origins of the Seminar on Content and Methods in the Social Sciences, now chaired by Tony Carnes. I picked that seminar because I enjoy attending it when I can, and learned it was founded by Joseph Maier, a German refugee with a Columbia PhD in sociology, who had an illustrious career as an author after a stint as the key translator for interrogators working at the Nuremberg Trials of 1946-47. His oral history, complemented by the minutes of his seminar, convinced me that there are treasures to be unearthed, and that everyone who cares for their seminar should pitch in. If we are all focused on the task, I am confident we can get this book to Columbia University Press in time to have it appear in 2020, our 75th anniversary year. I hope every Seminar will discuss this opportunity at an early meeting in the Spring, and that you will not hesitate to reach out to all of us in the office if you have any questions or suggestions about how best to accomplish the assembly of this unique volume.

Director, The University Seminars
CALLING ALL CHAIRS!

You are cordially invited to lunch at Faculty House with the Director and Deputy Director (Bob & Alice) this semester. Please send Alice a few possible dates. We’ll organize small groups and talk about the seminars and more.

To schedule a lunch, email Alice: an2113@columbia.edu

NEW ADDITIONS to the UNIVERSITY SEMINARS DIGITAL ARCHIVE

The University Seminars Office is pleased to announce that minutes, announcements, and related materials from years 2001-2012 have been incorporated into The University Seminars Digital Archive. Available to scholars at the Rare Book & Manuscript Library Reading Room, this collection contains 40,625 items from 194 seminars ranging in date from 1944-2012.

New content will continue to be added on a yearly basis, as per the five year privacy policy.

To submit a request to access archival materials, please use The University Seminars online finding aid. You will be directed to set up a Special Collections Research Account. From here you may request a laptop or specific boxes from the collection. Read more...

PLEASE NOTE: Formal invitations and flyers for the Annual Dinner will go out in March, and will include full details for the event. In the meantime please mark your calendars...

Germany Past and Present will be held on the occasion of Volker Berghahn’s 80th birthday. This half-day conference will feature Berghahn’s former students, now prominent university professors, discussing their scholarly work. They will chart their academic and intellectual journeys, partly influenced by Berghahn, as well as how their work has impacted the breadth of German history. When Professor Berghahn began his scholarship and teaching a half century ago, the field was still dominated by political and military history. Since then, German historical writing has proliferated and now includes fields covering areas such as social, intellectual, cultural, gender, minorities, and memory and emotions. This conference will explore the varieties of perspectives, methods, and approaches that constitute this expanded German history. We are fortunate to have distinguished Yale Professor Paul Kennedy to give the keynote on German history and his lifetime friendship with Volker.

The Culture, Power, Boundaries seminar will offer three notable contributions to the anthropological discussion in multiple fields during the Spring of 2018:

- February 5, Orin Starn (Duke) with The Last Revolution: Rethinking Peru’s Shining Path
- March 5, Genese Sodikoff (Rutgers, Newark) with Multispecies Infrastructures of Zoonosis
- April 9, Sonia Das (New York University) with ‘*Les maudits T-A-----S!’: Racial Slurs, Comedy, and the Pragmatics of Hate/Free Speech in Diverse Francophone Publics

The Seminar on Religion and Writing is sponsoring Of Prophets and Saints: Literary Traditions and “convivencia” in Medieval and Early Modern Iberia, which will take place in Madrid (Spain) on February 22 and 23, 2018. For more information about the international and interdisciplinary workshop on comparative hagiography, which is co-organized by seminar member Dagmar Riedel (CSIC-Columbia University.) Visit the workshop website...

Book Launch for A Time to Stir: Columbia ’68

Celebrate the publication of a new collection of essays written by Columbia ’68ers (and edited by Paul Cronin) There will be a short film presentation followed by a conversation with participants of the Columbia University protests. Featured speakers include Ray Brown, Karla Spurlock-Evans, and Mark Rudd. Moderated by Paul Cronin.
Studies in Religion

Tony Carnes’ Asian American Religions was published on July 2017 in the Oxford Research Encyclopedia of Religions. The article is an overview of Asian American religions, which have dramatically increased their presence in the United States. Partly, this is a function of the increasing population of Asian Americans since 1965. The discussion covers the origins and history of Asian American religions as well as their beliefs, doctrines, worship, and rituals.

The publication of the Oxford Research Encyclopedia of Religions is available via online and in paper book format.

Modern East Asia: Japan

Twentieth Century Politics and Society

The chair of Seminar 555, Chris Dietrich, published his first book, Oil Revolution, with Cambridge University Press in June 2017. Former rapporteur, Stephen Wertheim, has been hired as a Lecturer at Birkbeck, University of London.

Brazil

Ana Paulina Lee’s book, Mandarin Brazil: Race, Representation, and Memory (Stanford University Press, 2018) is due out shortly.

At What Price Passion, Food and Foodways publication, November 2017

Innovation in Education

Prof. Uwe P. Gielen of St. Francis College, a member of the Seminar on Innovation in Education is a co-editor of Internationalizing the Teaching of Psychology, just published by IAP Publishers. The book has been endorsed by Philip Zimbardo, past-president of the American Psychological Association: “I see this bold new volume as a great leap forward for international psychology...For psychology to continue to be relevant in the 21st century, it must become more international. This book will help us accomplish this challenging but rewarding goal.”

The co-chair of the Seminar on Innovation in Education, Elizabeth Cohn, has been appointed to the Rudin Distinguished Chair in Community Health at the City University of New York.

613 | Full Employment, Social Welfare, and Equity

Trudy Goldberg, Co-chair, published the article: “The Living New Deal” in Dollars & Sense:

In the depths of the Great Depression, the New Deal mounted job creation programs that put millions of unemployed Americans back to work. The projects they worked on changed the face of the nation, greatly enhancing our physical, environmental, human service, and cultural resources. The publication of the Map and Guide to New Deal New York City—demonstrating the tremendous impact of these work programs on the City—was an opportunity, not only to show what enlightened government programs had once accomplished, but to promote an updated model of New Deal job creation.
